THE DUNDEE ADVERTISER.

Daily. Eight Pages. One Penny.

THE LEADING NEWSPAPER IN SCOTLAND NORTH OF THE FORTH.

Is an old-established Liberal Newspaper that has been repeatedly enlarged of late years, in consequence of the favour in which its large circulation and influence have caused it to be held as an Advertising Medium, and of the efforts made to render it complete in all its departments. By the spirit and enterprise of its Managers, the ADVERTISER has become a splendid Advertising Medium, and is now invariably selected for all important announcements intended to be brought under the notice of the Mercantile, Manufacturing, Shipping, Professional, and Agricultural interests. Its reports and statistics upon the Linen and Jute trades, of which Dundee is the seat, are quoted in all important commercial centres. On public questions its tone is fearlessly independent. Its London offices, at 145 Fleet Street, are connected by special telegraph wire with the Head Office in Dundee, and it has also Branch Offices, with Special Reporting and Publishing Staffs attached, in the following important centres, viz. :—Forfar, Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen, Cupar Fife, Perth, Stirling, Edinburgh, and Glasgow.

Publishers—JOHN LENG & CO., 7 Bank Street, Dundee.
London Office, 145 Fleet Street, E.C.

THE EVENING TELEGRAPH.

Daily. One Halfpenny.

FOR AFTERNOON READERS. A POPULAR AND DOMESTIC JOURNAL.

Largest Evening Circulation in Dundee, and throughout the Counties of Forfar, Perth, & Fife.

The TELEGRAPH is noted for the extent and multitude of its Special Telegrams, its prompt Market and Stock Exchange Intelligence, its rapid Telegraphic Reports of Important Meetings and Events, and for its interesting Literary Extracts.

Publishers—JOHN LENG & CO., 7 Bank Street, Dundee.

THE PEOPLE'S JOURNAL.

Weekly. Saturdays. One Penny.

CIRCULATION, 140,000 COPIES WEEKLY. BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM
IN SCOTLAND.

The JOURNAL circulates not only in the United Kingdom, but all over the world, particularly in the British Colonies and in the United States of America. It has, with perhaps one exception, the LARGEST SALE IN BRITAIN OUT OF LONDON; and as it is read by all classes, its standing as an Advertising medium is unrivalled. The JOURNAL contains Serial Stories by the most popular novelists of the age; is publishing a most interesting series of Illustrated Articles on Scotch Castles; contains Leading Articles on the Political and Social Questions of the day; and is a splendid Local and General Weekly Newspaper.

EDZELL,

WITH THE PARISHES OF LETHNOT AND NAVAR, LOCHLEE AND STRACATHRO.

EDZELL is a large parish and village, the latter six miles north from Brechin, its post town. The parish is situated chiefly in this county, with a small portion in Kincardineshire; it is 14 miles in length, and forms the north-east point of the county, the lower part bounded by Stracathro, the middle by Lethnot, and Navar on the west; and that part in Kincardineshire by Fettercairn on the east; the upper or water-side by Lochlee on the west, and on the north by Stracathro in Kincardineshire, and Birse in Aberdeenshire. The village is neat and well built, having two main streets with several others diverging therefrom, situated on the banks of the North Esk; it is well supplied with gas by a company, who have their works at the south side of the village. The ruins of the ancient castle of Edzell is the chief object of interest, and is considered one of the finest ruins of the kind in Scotland. It was formerly the residence of the Lindsays of Glen Esk. The North Esk on the east, and the West Water on the west, are the only streams which flow through the parish; it is very healthy, and the scenery around is of a very beautiful description, and much resorted to by summer visitors. The Grampian Hills, running east and west, are in the immediate neighbourhood. One mile north of the village, where the North Esk takes its course, a most striking and imposing sight presents itself. The scenery here is truly magnificent, the river forming in some parts cascades or waterfalls. There is a parish church and also a Free church in the village, and a school. Fairs, the third Thursday in February, first Monday in May, fourth Friday in July, fourth Wednesday in August, and in October for cattle and sheep. The parish embraces an area of 20,068 statute acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 976, and in 1881, 823.

LETHNOT AND NAVAR is a joint parish, four miles and a half west from Edzell, and eight miles north from Brechin (its post town), fifteen miles in length, and about seven miles in breadth, having Edzell on the east, and Menmuir on the south, Lochlee on the north, Menmuir Fearn, Tannadie and Clova on the west, and Stracathro on the south-east; the stream called the West Water runs through the middle of the parish, or between Lethnot proper and Navar. The hills in the parish form part of the Grampian range. There is a parish church and a school. Acreage, 26,590. Population in 1871, 318.

LOCHLEE is a parish, twelve miles from Edzell, and eighteen from Brechin (its post town). It is about eighteen miles in length, by about eight in breadth, and is bounded on the north by the parishes of Birse, Aboyne and Glenmuick in Aberdeenshire, on the west by Cortachy and Clova, on the south by Lethnot and Navar, and on the east by Edzell. It is situated among the Grampians, a mountainous and bleak district, chiefly adapted for pasture, and bordering on the counties of Kincardine and Aberdeen. Some of the eminences of this district vary from 2,000 to 4,000 feet above the sea level. The soil is light, and the crops not very remunerative. Here is some of the finest scenery in Scotland. The parish receives its name through the loch so named. The principal streams which rise and traverse the parish are the Lee, Mark, and the Tarff, tributaries of the North Esk, which enters the sea near Montrose. At INVERMARK is the shooting lodge of the Earl of Dalhousie. The parish church is at the west end of the parish. There is an Episcopal church and parochial school. This district was once the property of the Lindsays of Glen Esk, but now Lord Dalhousie is sole heir. Acreage, 58,882. Population in 1871, 424.

STRACATHRO, anciently written Strickathrow, is a parish about seven miles long and two broad, bounded on the north-east by Fettercairn, on the north and north-west by Edzell; on the west by Menmuir; on the east by Marykirk; on the south by Brechin; on the south-east by Dum and Logie Pert, and contains the small village of INCHBARE, situated two miles from Edzell; corn and black cattle are the principal products. The churchyard, which is about four miles north from Brechin (its post town), is said to have been the scene of the surrender of the crown of Scotland by John Balliol to Edward I., in 1296; in the same cemetery are three tombstones, said by tradition to mark the graves of three Danish generals. In the north-western part of the parishes rises the conspicuous hill of Lundie. There is a parish church and school in connection. Acreage of the parish, 5,259; population in 1871, 503.

FORFAR,

WITH THE PARISHES OF INVERARITY, KINNETTLES AND RESCOBIE.

FORFAR is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town, and the capital of the parish of its name; 57 miles N. from Edinburgh, 15 W. from Arbroath, 14 N. from Dundee, 13 S.W. from Brechin, and 5 E. by N. from Glamis; situate in the lowest part of a country sloping towards it on all sides; and on the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian Railway, on which line there is a station adjacent to the town. The branch line from Forfar to Dundee is also in the vicinity of the town. Forfar is now of pleasant appearance, though strict regularity has by no means been observed in the formation of the streets, which contain many well-built houses and handsome shops. A large number of beautiful suburban villas have been built to the south and west of the town. Some years since were erected in Castle street, at the general expense of the shire, a handsome suite of County buildings. The Town House, which was re-built previously, besides the requisite offices, contains a spacious upper room for public meetings and amusements. The inhabitants support an excellently conducted newsroom and library, the latter comprising upwards of three thousand volumes. The original charters which constitute Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, and eleven councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally; and a police court for the determination of local, civil, and police affairs—the latter department confided to constables. The burgh unites with Montrose, Brechin, Bervie and Arbroath in sending one member to Parliament; the present is the Right Hon. W. E. Baxter (of Kincaldrum), Ashcliffe, Dundee. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs, &c., may be averaged at about £2,000 per annum. The chief trade of the town and of its vicinity is the weaving of osenaburgs and other coarse linens. There are now power-loom factories and bleachworks in full operation, employing from about 2,500 to 3,000 hands. There are several respectable inns, the principal being the County and Commercial, the Royal, Castle street, and the Star, opposite the Railway station. The Forfar Herald and Kircmearn Advertiser, established in 1878, is the only newspaper in the burgh, and is published every Friday, by Messrs. D. Christie and Son, Castle st. There are six general banking establishments, viz., branches respectively of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, and the Bank of Scotland, Limited. There are likewise a branch of the National Security Savings Bank and a Penny Savings Bank in the town. Few towns have improved more of late than Forfar. Many excellent dwelling-houses and shops have been erected within the last few years, and many of the streets greatly improved. The new County buildings, near the railway station, and a public hall, the free gift of Mr. Peter Reid, in the same neighbourhood, add much to the appearance of the north side of the town. At KINGSMUIR, in this parish, is a station on the Dundee and Forfar direct line of the Caledonian Railway Company.

The places of worship are two churches under the Establishment, two Free, an Episcopal, an Independent, an United Presbyterian, a Baptist, and a Roman Catholic chapel. In the steeple of the parish church is a very fine bell, presented to the town in the seventeenth century by a native named Strang, who is said to have been brought up from the parish funds; but having gone to Stockholm, amassed a large fortune, and took this manner of showing his gratitude, besides bequeathing a large sum of money for behoof of the poor of the town. There are also a Poor House and an Infirmary for the accommodation of the town and the neighbouring parish; the former contains eighty-five beds and the latter forty. There are several public and private schools of repute for pupils of either sex; the Forfar Academy, an excellent institution, commenced its instructive course in 1815, and comprises the usual routine of a liberal education, and includes, among other accomplishments, perfection in the classics, mathematics, the languages, music, &c. Two burgh schools, for the benefit of the poorer classes have been built at the different ends of the town; they are very commodious, and ably conducted by their respective masters. In 1850 a public cemetery was formed; it occupies nine Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs, &c., forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery, which occupies one of those gently sloping hills for which this part of the country is so noted, a fine monument was erected in 1852 by public subscription to the memory of Sir Robert Peel. The figure stands upon the centre of a large pedestal, covered by a dome, which is supported on eight pillars. From its site the town and surrounding district may be seen to great advantage, while the monument is seen on its elevated position at a considerable distance. In 1881 a first class supply of gravitation water was introduced into the town from the Den of Ogil. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth; it is a beautiful sheet of water, abounding with pike, perch, and trout. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Queen Margaret, as a separate establishment from her husband Malcolm. At the partial drainage of the lake, about seventy years since, for the purpose of obtaining its fertilising marl, some weapons and instruments were found at the bottom; these were conjectured to have been the implements used by the murderers of Malcolm II. at Glamis, on the ground of a tradition which asserts that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake on the ice, went down and perished. The date of the erection of Forfar Castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but it is said to have been the place of meeting of the first parliament convened by King Malcolm Canmore, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. A castle tower is here erected as an observatory, whence is obtained the best view of the town and surrounding neighbourhood. The Rev. John Bruce, the intelligent author of the "Statistical Account of the Parish of Forfar," furnishes a number of particulars illustrative of the rise of the town, its tastes and appearances. He says that about the middle of the last century there were not above seven tea-kettles, seven pairs of bellows, and as many watches in Forfar; now (1793) he adds, every house in town has a tea-kettle and bellows, and every menial servant must have his watch. At the same not distant period, an ox, valued at forty shillings, supplied the flesh market of Forfar for a fortnight. The steady advancement of population, trade, and agricultural improvements, both before and since 1795, when this gentleman wrote, have, in this district, as elsewhere, revolutionised the prices and consumption of articles, and now Forfar is one of the most thriving and comfortable towns in the county. The market is held on Saturday for butter and grain, and cattle markets are held every Monday, at the Auction Mart adjoining the railway station. A fair is held on North moor for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November. The parish of Forfar, which embraces an area of 8,353 acres, in 1871 had a population of 12,585, at the same period the Parliamentary royal burgh contained 10,931. In 1881 the numbers were:—For the parish, 13,625; for the burgh, 12,818.

INVERARITY is a parish about three miles square, bounded on the north by the parish of Forfar, its post town, four miles distant therefrom; on the south by Mouikie and Murros; on the east by Guthrie and Dunnichen, and on the west by Kinnettles, Tealing, and Glamis. Freestone and grey slate abound in the parish; the soil is various. The parish church is conveniently situated. There is also a parochial school. The turnpike from Forfar to Dundee passes through the parish, which embraces an area of 9,593 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 885, and in 1881, 862.

KINNETTLES, a parish said to have derived its name from the Gaelic word signifying the head of a bog, is about two miles in length, with an equal breadth, three miles east from Forfar, its post town, and two miles from Glamis. Although the parish cannot boast of any river, yet it is beautifully diversified, having a large rivulet called the Kirbet, which at KIRKTON is crossed by a chain bridge, and a stone bridge of three arches at DOUGLASTOWN (these places are small villages in the parish); this stream, after a circuitous course of seventy-two miles, and ten miles southward of its source, finally joins the Tay. The land is fertile, and beneath the surface an abundance of sandstone, whinstone, and slate abounds. The parish church was built in 1812. There is now a very handsome parish school built at Douglastown, to replace the old one at Kinnettles. Acreage, 2,860. Population of parish in 1871, 378, and in 1881, 418.

RESCOBIE is a parish about three miles east from Forfar, its post town, and is about six miles in length and from one to two and a half in breadth, situated between the hills of Dunnichen and Turin. It is bounded by Forfar on the west, Aberlemno, Guthrie, and Kirkden on the east, Kirkton, Dunnichen, and Forfar on the south, and Aberlemno on the north. The soil is various, and mostly in cultivation, with some thriving plantations, and very little waste ground; it has no river or considerable stream, but it is sufficiently watered for domestic and agricultural purposes, and is intersected by the Loch of Rescobie, which is more than a mile in length. From the Loch of Balgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno, on the north and east of Rescobie, issues the chief branch of the Lunan waters, which gives name to a bay in the German Ocean, into which it falls about twelve miles from Rescobie. These lakes abound with marl, a manure which is very good if skilfully used; extensive stone quarries of various qualities are wrought in this and adjoining parishes, great quantities being conveyed to distant parts by rail from Aulbar Road station, which is situated on the borders of Aberlemno, and the centre of a district famous for its excellent quality of stone. There are a parish church and school, the latter containing a very good and extensive library for the use of the inhabitants. Acreage, 6,559; population of parish in 1871, 748, and in 1881, 635.

FRIOCKHEIM,

WITH THE PARISHES OF CARMYLLIE, GUTHRIE, KINNELL, AND KIRKDEN.

FRIOCKHEIM is a modern village, in the parish of Kirkden, six miles from Arbroath, its post town, situate on the north bank of the Lunan, and near the line of the Dundee, Arbroath, and Forfar section of the Caledonian Railway. It owes its origin to Mr. Anderson, who laid out the ground on a regular plan, and divided it into small lots, in order to encourage the settlement of weavers, &c., and by far the greater proportion of the inhabitants are employed in the weaving of linen cloth, and also at the neighbouring quarries. Altogether the situation of this place is peculiarly eligible for the seat of manufactures, being nearly equi-distant from most of the towns in the county, and in the immediate vicinity of a railway. In 1855 upwards of £700 was collected by public subscription, and the proceeds applied to the erection of a handsome chapel, in connection with the Established Church. It also contains a Free church, and an independent chapel. There is no municipal government, the hitherto exemplary conduct and contented habits of the inhabitants rendering such description of superintendence unnecessary, but there is a resident police officer. Population returned with the parish, GUTHRIE parish is divided into two parts, lying nearly six miles asunder, the nearest portion being about one-and-a-half miles from Frickheim. It is a junction on the Dundee, Arbroath, and Forfar section of the Caledonian Railway, and about six miles north-west from Arbroath, its post-town. The land slopes from the hill of Guthrie to the south and south-east, a part only being arable. Prior to the Reformation this parish had a Collegiate church, with a provost and three prebendaries. The patronage of the parish belongs to the family of Guthrie, one of whom was slain at the battle of Flodden. The entire parish contains 3,323 acres, and in 1871 possessed a population of 401, and in 1881, 459.

KINNELL parish, one mile from Frickheim, lies on the north side of the Lunan, and the church stands on the bank of the river, at the distance of six miles north-west from Arbroath, its post town, and about four miles west from Inverkeilor. The parish extends about four miles in length, by three in breadth, embraces an area of 6,577 statute acres, and is separated from the sea by Lunan parish; it is bounded on the north by the parishes of Farnell and Maryton, on the east by those of Crigg, Lunan and Inverkeilor, on the south by the latter, and on the west by those of Kirkden, Guthrie, and Aberkenmuir. The surface of this district is mostly flat, and in a good state of cultivation; and there are some plantations in a thriving condition. Within the parish are several tanals; and tradition points out the spot where a battle was fought between the rival clans of Lindsay and Ogilvie, in the year 1445. Population in 1871, 766.

KIRKDEN is a parish between six and seven miles long and two broad, comprising an area of 4,939 statute acres, bounded on the north by Rascobie and Guthrie, on the south by Carmyllie, on the east by Kinnell and Inverkeilor, and by Darnichen on the west, and is watered by the Lunan and the Vinny, one of its tributaries. A small patch of Dumichen parish lies in the western division of Kirkden, which latter is tolerably fertile, and the lands well enclosed and planted. In this district are some remains of antiquity, including an obelisk, bearing some rude characters, the meaning of which cannot now be deciphered. The village of Frickheim is in this parish. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,623, of which number 1,129 were returned for Frickheim; in 1881 the parish contained 1,679, and Frickheim, 1,935.

CARMYLLIE is a parish six miles in length by three in breadth, and bounded by parts of eight parishes, viz: Panbride, Monikie, Guthrie, Dumichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigens, and Arbistot. The village of Carmyllie is about five miles s. from Frickheim. The parish is hilly, and contains much land that is unproductive; but there are considerable quarries, from which good pavement stones are obtained, and exported in great quantities. The small river Elliott runs through the whole length of the parish, which contains an area of 7,553 statute acres; and in 1871 had a population of 1,369.

GLAMIS,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF EASSIE AND NEVAY.

GLAMIS (formerly Glamis) is a rich and fertile parish five miles in length by one mile in breadth, bounded on the south by Teating, Auchterhouse and Newtyle, on the west by Eassie and Nevay, on the north by Airdrie and Kirriemuir, and on the east by Forfar and Kinnettles. The village, a small one, is twelve miles north from Dundee, twelve north-east from Coupar Angus, five west from Forfar, and the same distance south from Kirriemuir; situated in the vale of Strathmore, which is watered by the river Dean, and is one of the best enclosed, drained, and farmed districts in Scotland. The principal object of interest in this district is Glamis Castle, which stands in a park near the village. This is an edifice of princely and antique appearance, consisting of an irregular congregation of tall towers, some of which are of remoter date than others. It was anciently a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II., in 1084; it afterwards became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the Crown. Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who on marrying the king's second daughter, became the founder of the present noble family of Strathmore; and the eldest son of the earl bears the title of Lord Glamis. On the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glamis for witchcraft, in 1587, the castle once more became royal property, and was a residence of James V. but it was afterwards restored to the family. It contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle stands a remarkable curiosity, namely, a great number of dials, thus disposed—on a pedestal stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in their four paws, facing the cardinal points. From their heads rise a huge mass of stone, something like a pine-apple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making the number of these ancient time-pieces eighty-four. The castle, with its historical associations: the pedestal, and Malcolm's gravestone—a huge stone of rude design, standing in the garden of the manse—form the chief attraction to tourists in the county of Forfar. The castle is open to visitors on Fridays. There is a society of Freemasons established here, who hold their meetings in a neat building erected for the purpose, and which is also used for lectures and other purposes. CHARLESTON is a small village in the parish. Charleston and Glen Ogilvie abound with very valuable stone, two large quarries being at the present time in work. The station at Glamis is situated about one and a half miles from the village, and is on the Perth and Aberdeen Section of the Caledonian Railway Company. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April, first Wednesday in May, first Wednesday after the 26th of May, first Saturday after the 28th of October, and first Wednesday after the 22nd of November. Acreage, 14,347. In 1871 the parish had a population of 1,813, and in 1881, 1,631. EASSIE and NEVAY is a joint parish three miles west from Glamis, seven from Forfar, and seven south-west from Kirriemuir, about four in length and three in breadth, bounded on the east and south by Glamis, the small river Dean forming the northern boundary. The land to some extent is quite flat, much of which affords excellent pasturage for sheep and cattle. The Scottish North-Eastern Section of the Caledonian Railway Co. passes through the parish, joining the Dundee and Comar Angus about a mile north of Newtyle. The parish church, a neat building, was erected in 1833. In the old manse stands a portion of an old Roman Catholic church, the graveyard adjoining being very remarkable on account of its gravestones being engraved in old Roman letters. Acreage, 5,053; population of the joint parish in 1871, 586, and in 1881, 561.

INVERKEILOR,

WITH THE PARISH AND VILLAGES OF LUNAN, ETHIEHAVEN, LEYSMILL, AND CHAPELTON.

INVERKEILOR parish presents a front of five miles to the sea at Lunan Bay, near which, on an eminence at the mouth of the Lunan river, stands an old venerable ruin, called "Red Castle," which is said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat; the parish is of an oblong form, extending west about seven miles, and four and a half at its greatest breadth. The parish church stands inland, on the Lunan water, at the distance of five and three-quarter miles from Arbroath, its post town, and seven from Montrose. The Keilor rivulet runs through the parish to the sea; and the small fishing village of ETHIEHAVEN is situated at the mouth of that river. LEYSMILL and CHAPELTON are also small villages in the parish; CHANCE INN is also a place in this parish. There are an Established church and a Free church, the latter erected in the year 1843. It likewise contains several schools, in which are taught the ordinary branches of education. There are in the parish several fine seats, particularly Ethie House, the seat of the Earl of Northesk, about a mile from which, eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, at one time a cell of Aberbro-thock; and a short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead. The ridge of the coast at this point is very rocky and precipitous, about 200 feet above sea level, and continues gradually rising in a southerly direction for four miles to Dickmountlaw Hill in the adjoining parish of St. Vigean. This parish, which comprises 10,240 acres, in 1871 had a population of 1,521, and in 1881, 1,671.

LUNAN is a small parish situated about seven miles from Arbroath, its post town, and four from Montrose, two miles in length by two in breadth, embracing 1,910 acres, bounded on the east by the German Ocean, on the south by the Lunan water, which divides the parish from Inverkeilor, on the west by Kinnell, and on the north by Maryton and Craig. The bay is one of the finest and most romantic in Scotland, forming a segment of about five miles at each extremity, of which there is about a mile of bold, rugged, and perpendicular rocks, rising occasionally in pyramid-shaped columns of 100 or 150 feet high. The parish church is situated at the south-east extremity of the parish. Lunan parish in 1871 contained a population of 248, and in 1881, 243.

POST OFFICE, Chance Inn, INVERKEILOR, Thomas Thomson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Arbroath) at twenty minutes before nine morning, and from Frickheim at half-past one afternoon, and from Lunan at twenty minutes before two afternoon, and are despatched to Arbroath at ten minutes before two afternoon, and to Frickheim at nine morning.

KIRRIEMUIR,

WITH THE PARISHES OF AIRLIE, CORTACHY AND CLOVA, KINGOLDRUM AND LINTRATHEN

KIRRIEMUIR is a town of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, and capital of its parish, 62 miles N. from Edinburgh, 18 N. from Dundee, 6 N.W. from Forfar, and 5 N. from Glamis. The parish is divided into two considerable districts, which are separated by part of the parish of Kingoldrum, the northern part, usually called GLENPROSEN, is chiefly pastoral; the southern being chiefly agricultural and manufacturing. The town is situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south-west side of the hill, along the northern brow of a beautiful glen, through which flows the small rivulet Gairic. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the delightful vale of Strathmore is brought into view, displaying one of the grandest panoramic scenes it is possible to conceive. The town, the appearance of which has much improved of late years, consists of several streets diverging from each other—fancifully described as resembling the shaft and arms of an anchor. A branch line of railway from the North-Eastern section of the Caledonian Railway unites it with other cities and towns, a neat and commodious station being erected at the west end of the town. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the thriving seat of considerable manufactures, comprising about twenty varieties of linen; it is celebrated for the excellent fabric of its cloth, and the ingenuity and industry of those employed in producing it. Some idea may be formed of the importance of this trade from the fact that the looms of Kirriemuir have furnished, in one year, upwards of one hundred thousand pieces, varying from one hundred to one hundred and seventy yards, giving employment to more than two thousand weavers. The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is at the present day unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its baillie once extended over a large tract of country. Lord Douglas is superior of the burgh. There is a superintendent of police, and a sheriff's court is held six times a year for the recovery of small debts. The places of worship with the ministers are given at a subsequent page—they comprise edifices for the Established church, the Free church, United Presbyterians, Original Seceders, and Episcopalians. There are four banking establishments, branches respectively of the British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland, Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Bank of Scotland, Limited. There are also several respectable hotels, including a temperance hotel. The inhabitants of this respectable little town are not more notable for their ingenious and persevering industry, than for their general intelligence and benevolence. Libraries are also connected with the several religious denominations. Besides the public school, there is a seminary, erected and endowed from a bequest made in 1829, by Mr. John Webster, writer and banker, and managed by the parochial minister and his Kirk session, with which there is a handsome bursary connected, educating about 49 or 50 boys free. A little to the east of the town is the cemetery, situated on the sloping side of an eminence, the grounds being beautifully laid out and terraced, and command a most extensive view of the valley of Strathmore, the Sidlaw hills, and the Grampians in the distance; all uniting to form one of the most picturesque landscapes within the compass of Scottish scenery. Three miles to the north east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carly, stands the castle of Inverquhar, a large Gothic edifice, in state of good preservation; and two miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The surface of the parish, which extends some twenty miles by sea and embraces an area of 35,600 statute acres, is much diversified; to the east and west of the town it is almost level, but the greater proportion of the district is beautifully varied with hills and dales, rivers, woods and arable fields—some parts embellished with thriving plantations, and it is intersected by roads in all directions. The weekly market is held on Friday, and there is a monthly cattle market; and the fairs on the second Wednesday after the 26th May, the 24th of July or the Wednesday after; the 19th October or the Wednesday after; the second Wednesday after the 22nd November, and on the first Friday after the 26th of May and the 22nd November. The population of the entire parish was in 1871, 6,420, and in 1881, 6,616.

AIRLIE (formerly Airly) is a parish about six miles west from Kirriemuir, its post town, situated in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire; its length is about six miles, with a breadth varying from a half to four miles, bounded on the north by Lintathren and Kingoldrum, on the east by Kirriemuir and Glamis, on the south by Eassie and Meigle, and on the west by Airth and Ruthven, part of the line of boundary is formed by the river Isla and its tributaries, the Meigle and Dean. Within the parish is situated Airlie Castle, the ancient seat of the Ogilvies, Earls of Airlie, and now much frequented in the summer months by visitors. Small portions only of the ancient structure are preserved, these being the front wall and turret with the arched portcullis, which are now connected with the modern mansion of Airlie. Acreage of the parish, 8,925. Population in 1871, 778, and in 1881, 844.

CORTACHY and CLOVA is a joint parish about six miles from Kirriemuir, the post town. It is about nineteen miles long and from one mile to six in breadth, bounded on the north by the parishes of Lochec and Crathie, on the east by Tannadice and Lethnot, on the west by Crathie, and on the south by Kirriemuir, and embraces an area of 42,922 acres. Within the parish of Cortachy is Cortachy Castle, the summer residence of the Earl of Airlie. Population in 1871, 564, and in 1881, 442.

KINGOLDRUM is a parish and small village, about four miles distant from Kirriemuir, its post town. The length of the parish is about six and a half miles, and its average breadth is nearly three miles. It is bounded by the parishes of Kirriemuir and Cortachy on the north and east, by Airlie on the south, and by Lintathren on the west. Outlaw, the highest hill in the parish, rises to the height of 2,304 feet above the level of the sea; from its summit one of the most extensive views in Scotland may be obtained. Acreage, 9,619; population in 1871, 400, and in 1881, 389.

LINTRATHEN is a parish about twelve miles in length, and five in breadth; it contains the hamlets of BRIDEND and PYRMUDIE. It is bounded on the south by Airlie, on the west by Glenisla, on the north by the Grampians, and on the east by Kingoldrum. The district in which the parish is situated is termed the Braes of Angus, lying between the Grampian range and the valley of Strathmore. The loch from which the town of Dundee is supplied, adjoins the village of Lintathren at Bridgend. The streams which intersect the parish are the Meigle and the Isla, the latter dividing the parish on the west side from Glenisla and on which there are two beautiful waterfalls, the Reeky Linn and the Slings of Achrammie, from the former of which arose the name of Lintathren. Acreage, 22,624; population in 1871, 750, and in 1881, 641.

LETHAM,

WITH THE PARISH OF DUNNICHEN.

LETHAM is a village situated in the north-eastern portion of the parish of Dunnichen, five miles from Forfar, its post town, and one and a half miles from AULD BAR ROAD STATION, on the Scottish North-Eastern Section of the Caledonian Railway. It is a modern little place, having been erected some years ago on the estate of Mr. Dempster. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agricultural pursuits. Fairs are held on the 26th May, unless that day should fall on a Saturday, when it is held on Monday, and November 23rd. Population in 1871, 558.

DUNNICHEN, supposed to be a corruption of Dun Achen, "the hill or foot of the valley," is a parish which extends four miles in length, by about six in breadth, bounded on the N.W. by Forfar, on the S.W. by Inverarity, on the N. by Rescobie, on the E. by Kirriemuir, and on W. by Forfar. The greatest elevations are the hills of Dunnichen, 800 feet, and the hill of Dumbarrow 700 feet above the level of the sea. The medium elevation of the parish may be considered about 360 feet above the sea level, and consists of undulations or ridges, running from west to east, the greatest descent being towards Vinney Water (the only stream which runs through the parish) on the south. Sandstone and freestone abound in the parish. The land, which is nearly all arable, is tolerably fertile, having been much improved by the use of marl, artificial manures, and drainage. Acreage, 4,917. In 1871 the population of the parish was 1,586.

POST OFFICE, LETHAM, William Mitchell, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at half-past twelve noon, and are espached thereto at six morning.

Post Office, DUNNICHEN, James Miller, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at twenty minutes past eleven in the morning, and are despatched thereto at thirty-five minutes past six in the morning.

The nearest Money Order Office is at FORFAR, five miles distant.

* * Letters for the above places should be addressed "near FORFAR."

LOCHEE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LOCHEE is an important and highly prosperous village on the east border, and in the united parish of Luff and Benvie, situated one and a half miles north-west from Dundee, and forms part of the royal burgh of Dundee. It occupies a large space, being inconspicuous and dispersed, and presents the appearance of being a busy seat of manufactures. It contains several mills and factories for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute, &c., goods, the principal of these being Camperdown Linen Works, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers. These extensive works, which are the largest of this kind in Great Britain, cover a space of about twenty-four acres, and give employment to about 5,000 persons in the various processes of jute spinning, dyeing, bleaching, calendering, power and hand-loom weaving in all the various fabrics, including hemp and jute carpeting, jute carpet printing, and jute twine and rope spinning. These works have a tower with a splendid peal of fine-toned bells, and an excellent clock with four dials, which are illuminated at night. There is also a chimney shaft of about 300 feet in height, which receives the whole smoke from the works, and for ornamental architecture and usefulness is not surpassed. The Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian Railway passes through the village, and is connected by a branch which runs into these works for the conveyance of all goods to and from it. In addition to the above the Messrs. Cox Brothers have also large works, giving employment to a large number of Europeans and natives in India, situated on the river Hooghley, at Calcutta, where they dry and pack their jute by hydraulic presses, previous to being shipped to their works here. There are two stations conveniently situated for the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, one in the village and the other at CAMPERDOWN, about a mile north. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period. The stone from these quarries was used in the construction of the Houses of Parliament, the Dundee harbour, and is sent to foreign countries. The greater part of the inhabitants are employed at the works above alluded to. There are two Established churches, St. Luke's being the gift of Thomas H. Cox, Esq., a Free church, and one each for the Episcopalians, Baptists, Roman Catholics and United Presbyterians. The latter congregation finding their place of worship too small, have erected a handsome edifice at a cost of £5,000 to £6,000. It is in the Middle Pointed Gothic style, and measures seventy-one feet by fifty-eight feet inside, and thirty-three feet high. It has a gallery extending round three sides, and altogether it is seated for 1,000 persons; behind the church are class room, vestry, waiting room, &c. Externally the church has a handsome appearance, having a large five-light window in south front, over the central doorway; while at the south-west angle is a tower and spire rising to a height of one hundred and thirty feet above the ground. The tower contains a fine peal of eight bells, by Messrs. Mears and Stainbanks, of London. They were the first erected in any church in the burgh of Dundee. They were presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers, at a cost of from £400 to £500. James McLaren, Esq., architect, Dundee, furnished the designs. There are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the North of Scotland Bank Limited, and also a Savings Bank. In 1871 Lochee contained a population of 10,812.

POST OFFICE, High Street, LOCHEE, John Robertson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dundee) at twenty minutes before seven and twenty minutes before eleven morning and twenty minutes before six evening, and are despatched thereto at twenty minutes past eight morning, one noon, ten minutes before five afternoon and ten minutes before eight evening.

MENMUIR,

WITH THE PARISHES OF CARESTON AND FEARN.

MENMUIR is a parish, six and a half miles from north to south, and four and a half miles from east to west, and lies about five miles north of Brechin, its post town. It is bounded on the north by Stracathro and Lethnot, on the south by Brechin and Cariston, on the west by Fearn, and on the east by Brechin and Stracathro. The southern part is flat, and forms the vale of the Cruick water; to the north it is hilly and healthy. In the northern part of the parish are the Catterthmuirs, "with the best specimen of a hill fort in Europe." The parish, which embraces an area of 10,218 acres, in 1871 contained 761 inhabitants.

CARESTON (or Caraldston) is a small parish four miles west from Brechin, its post town, and the same distance from Tannadice, situated between the two latter, and on the north bank of the South Esk, and to the east of the Noran water, which flows through and unites in this parish, which is bounded on the north by Menmuir, on the east by Brechin, on the south by Aberlemno, and on the west by Tannadice and Fearn. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. The only object of immediate interest in the parish is the castle of Careston, erected about the year 1400, of which John Adamson, Esq. is the proprietor, formerly one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford. Above the mantel piece, in what is called the old drawing room, are depicted the royal arms of Scotland, under which is an inscription, one of the family having married King Robert II.'s eldest daughter. Although it cannot boast of much ornament in its construction, yet it carries in its appearance an aspect of grandeur well suited to a baronial castle. Careston parish comprises 2,065 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 209.

FEARN (or Feon) is a parish seven miles west from Brechin, its post town, and ten miles north-east from Forfar, situated at the foot of some of the Grampian hills. It is intersected by the Cruick water, and bounded on the south by that of Noran. Its form is nearly elliptic; on the south-west is the parish of Tannadice, on the north the united parish of Lethnot and Navar, and on the east Menmuir and Careston. The surface presents rich pastoral hills, and low grounds finely cultivated and enclosed, with extensive plantations of fir and other timber. Near the Noran stands the formerly celebrated Vane Castle, now a ruinous skeleton; it is about seven miles west of Brechin. Acreage of parish, 8,792; population in 1871, 948.

MONTROSE,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF CRAIG, DUN, FERRYDEN, HILLSIDE, LOGIE-PERT, MARYTON, AND USAN.

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and sea-port, the capital of its parish, and a branch station of the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian Railway, 72 miles N.E. from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 23 S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.W. from Inverberrie, 12 S. from Arbroath, and 8½ E. from Brechin. The German Ocean, the rivers North and South Esk, and a large expanse of water designated "Montrose Basin," so nearly encompass the town as to constitute its site a peninsula. It was anciently called Celuria, but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose, has been controverted by etymologists. Camden derives the name from the Latin Mons Rosarum, the "Mount of Roses," which is countenanced by the seal of the town bearing the ornament of roses, with the motto Mare didat, Rosa decorat—"the sea enriches, and the rose adorns." Montrose is connected with many important events in Scottish history; it is mentioned as the port from which Sir James Douglas embarked in 1390, with numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, carrying along with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and as having sent forth from its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville; it was the birth-place of the warlike Marquis of Montrose, and the house in which he was born was occupied as an inn not many years ago. It is also celebrated as the birth-place of Joseph Hume, the distinguished statesman, who represented Montrose for a great number of years in the British senate, and to whose memory a beautiful monument has been raised in High street; in the same street is a statue of the late Sir Robert Peel. Montrose bestows the title of Duke upon the chief of the family of Graham. This was the first port made by the French fleet, in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and the prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year. The High street of Montrose is of great width, the houses are lofty, many of them having their gables towards the street, which gives to the town an ancient aspect; and not only are the main streets strikingly clean, but the secondary ones are also neat and gas-lighted. About the centre of the High street is the Town House, a neat plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below. The South Esk is crossed by a magnificent suspension bridge, on the precise site of the former wooden one. The foundation stone of the masonry was laid in September, 1828, and the bridge declared opened in 1829. It was designed by Captain Brown, R.N., patentee, and finished at an expense of upwards of £20,000. It stretches across the river in a noble span—the distance between the points of suspension being 422 feet, and, together with its approaches, the structure extends 800 feet. It forms a roadway of 26 feet in breadth having a footpath on each side railed off. This structure is a great ornament to the town. Bridge street forms a very handsome approach to it. The river at the bridge is very deep, having 35 feet of water at spring tides and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides; and so rapid that during the ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour, formed by the river and an arm of the sea, is very commodious, and a safe asylum for vessels in tempestuous weather. Two light-houses have been erected at a very great expense. They are a most valuable improvement, as they enable ships to enter the port in the darkest of nights. A larger house, in which the keeper of the house resides, is provided with accommodation for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck; and attached to their praise-worthy establishment is a life-boat. The quays in the harbour are very judiciously planned and built in the most substantial manner, and there is a wet dock and patent slip. The port has a custom house belonging to it, which comprehends within its bounds the coast from the Redhead on the south to the Bervie-brow or the Todhead on the north. There are two railway companies running into Montrose, having their own goods and passenger depots, viz. The Caledonian and North British. The shipping trade includes flax, corn, timber, coal, and cured fish. The principal manufactures of Montrose comprise flax spinning, linen yarns, sheetings, and sail cloth, which are carried on extensively; but there are various other branches of trading industry of considerable importance, among which may be enumerated rope and sail making, and two starch manufactories. The extent of the wood trade at this port deserves special mention, as it is believed to be second only to that of Greenock. The building of wooden ships, which at one time was carried on very extensively, has now been superseded by those built of iron. There are eight branch banks and a savings bank—the latter with government security. Several commodious inns afford the necessary accommodation to visitors, the principal are the Star and the Queen's. The Star Hotel has long been established, and in all respects affords excellent accommodation. The Queen's is also a good commercial and family hotel, centrally situated. The Downs or Links are situated between the town and the sea, and are the most extensive of any in Scotland, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature for the favourite and healthful Scottish game of golf and the popular game of cricket, both of which are much practised. The railway passing through the Links has a little curtailed their dimensions, but a portion has been very tastefully laid out, and in one of the cross walks a fountain erected. Montrose has its assembly room and other places of amusement, and numerous institutions, charitable, educational, scientific and social. Two admirably conducted newspapers issue weekly from the Montrose press—the Review, Liberal, and the Standard, Conservative. The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II., but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The municipal government is vested in the provost, three magistrates, dean of guild, hospital master, treasurer and eleven councillors. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of commissioners. A burgh or baillie court is held every Thursday in the court room, a justice of the peace court on the first Monday of every month, and a sheriff's court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September, and November; the two last mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh is united with those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath and Inverberrie in returning one member to Parliament. The present member is the Right Hon. W. E. Baxter, Ashcliff, Dundee. There are three volunteer corps in Montrose, viz., artillery, and the first and second companies of rifles. The parish church is a large building, measuring 98 ft. long by 65 ft. over walls. This church has two galleries, and is capable of holding 2,500 people; the steeple is lofty, surmounted by a towering spire, which can be seen at a considerable distance. There are three handsome Free churches, and two Episcopalian chapels, and various other places of worship are in the town, for which see the end of the Directory of this town. The public charities of Montrose are very numerous. Among these are the ancient Hospital Fund, under the guardianship of the town; the relief from this charity is distributed among about 144 persons, not paupers; the Royal Lunatic Asylum, incorporated by royal charter in 1810, now occupies a handsome building on an elevated site at Hillside, about a mile and a half from the town, and from which there is an extensive prospect of the surrounding country; an Infirmary and Dispensary, originally incorporated with the Lunatic Asylum, is still under charge of the directors of that institution; and Dorward's House of Refuge, all of which occupy capacious and ornamental structures. There are also several mortifications, which afford assistance to the deserving and indigent poor of the town. The Academy, situated on the Links is a handsome erection, surmounted by a neat dome; the establishment comprises a rector and six teachers in the various languages, writing and arithmetic, English grammar, &c. Many other educational establishments are supported; and the numerous societies, both religious and benevolent, maintained in the town are highly creditable to the munificence of the residents. Several libraries and reading rooms are supported, the principal being the one in a part of the Town House, reckoned to be the finest and most extensive this side the Frith of Forth. An interesting museum is maintained in a very tasteful building in Panmure place. The market is on Friday, and great hiring fairs are held on the Friday after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (old style), 26th May, and 22nd November. The parish of Montrose encloses an area of 4,134 acres. The population of the burgh for 1871 was 14,543, and in 1881, 14,975.

CRAIG parish, six miles in length, and two and a half at its greatest breadth, bounded by Montrose on the north, on the east and south by the German Ocean and Lunan, occupying the peninsula corner of land between the sea and the Montrose basin, is nine miles in circumference, and is filled by the tide at high water. The islet called INCH BRAVOCK or ROSSIE ISLAND, in the neck of water connecting the basin with the sea, belongs to the parish; and there are also within its limits the two small fishing villages of USAN and FERRYDEN; the latter being one of the largest and wealthiest on the east coast of Scotland; with a population of 1,570, and owning boats and other fishing appliances to the extent of about £23,000; the people are a very hardy and industrious race, and the women perform manual labour with the greatest ease. The land is generally arable, and beneath the surface nature has deposited abundance of limestone. Acreage, 4,371; population in 1871, 2,472.

The parish of DUN, four miles in length and the same in breadth, bounded on the north by Stracathro and Logie-Pert, on the south by Maryton and Farnell, on the west by Brechin, and on the east by Montrose, lies between Montrose and Brechin, on the north bank of the South Esk. The land is generally fertile, and the surface for the most part level. In the parish is a small lake, called Dun's Dish. Near the Bridge of Dun railway station, is a fine bridge of three arches, erected in the years 1785-7, which crosses the South Esk river, and is one of the strongest in Forfarshire.

MARYTON (or Maryton) is a parish, its length from east to west being about one and a half miles, and from north to south about three miles, lying on the south side of the South Esk, and the west side of the basin of Montrose, bounded by Craig (parish before-mentioned) on the south-east, by Farnell on the west, Montrose on the north, and by the sea and the parish of Lunan on the south. The land is arable and well-cultivated, and the parish derives considerable advantage from its proximity to the town of Montrose. Acreage of the parish, 3,562. Population in 1871, 396.

LOGIE-PERT, or LOGIE MONTROSE, as it was formerly called, was annexed to the parish of Pert about the early part of 1600; it is situated about five and a half miles south-east from Montrose, extending five miles from east to west, and three miles from north to south; bounded on the north by the North Esk river, on the south by Dun, on the east by Montrose, and on the west by Stracathro. The parish church is situated on the banks of the North Esk, commonly called the North Water. At DUBTON is the junction station for Montrose, on the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian Railway. HILLSIDE, which forms a suburb to Montrose, is partly in this parish, the remainder being in the parish of Montrose. At LOANHEAD in this parish is a station belonging to the North British Railway Co. There is a bleach works in the parish, which in 1871 contained a population of 1,251.

NEWTYLE,

WITH THE PARISH OF KETTINS.

NEWTYLE is a parish and village—the latter situated on the road from Dundee to Meikle (in Perthshire), eleven miles north-east from the former town, and somewhat above two south from the latter. It is a station on the Dundee, Newtyle and Coupar-Angus section of the Caledonian Railway. There is also a branch line from Newtyle to Alyth Junction and thence to Alyth. The neighbourhood is very pleasant and picturesque, and the village itself respectable. In the summer season it is a resort for visitors, especially from Dundee. It presents inducements to manufacturers from Dundee and other towns to establish works in this district, land being comparatively cheap and wages low; the locality of Newtyle is likewise considered most eligible as a depot for grain and other agricultural produce. The inhabitants of the village are occupied in agricultural pursuits. The village is supplied with gas from works in connection with Mr. Thomas's artificial manure manufactory. A church of the Establishment has been erected upon the site of the old one at a cost of £5,000, and is capable of accommodating 660 worshippers. This is a handsome building in the Norman-Gothic style of architecture, with a tower 85 feet in height, containing a two-dial clock; the clock was presented by Captain D. C. Burman. The edifice was opened for public worship in 1872, Andrew Heiton, Esq. of Perth, being the architect. There are also a Free church and a public school, in the village. The parish, which lies in the south-west part of the county, extends two miles in length by one and three-quarters in breadth, including a portion of the Sidlaw hills, from which the lands decline into the rich flat exposure of Strathmore. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hutton, built by Lawrence, Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balcreig. This parish, which embraces an area of 5,192 acres, in 1871 contained a population of 931; at the same period the village numbered 542.

KETTINS is a parish four miles from Newtyle, and one and a half from Coupar-Angus; a small portion of the parish is situated in Perthshire, the greater part being in the western district of Forfarshire, on the south side of the valley of Strathmore, and on the northern declivity of the Sidlaw hills. The length from east to west is four miles, the breadth from north to south three, inclusive of Bandirran, which is detached. It is delightfully situated on a little stream, which, after passing Coupar-Angus, falls into the Isla. The parish generally is tolerably fertile, and contains excellent sandstone, very durable for building purposes. The parish church, erected in 1768, anciently had six chapels dependent upon it. There is a public school in the village. The castle of Pitcur, a mile south of the church, and now in ruins, gives title to the ancient and honourable family of Hallyburton. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish and has a station at ARDLER. Kettins parish encloses an area of 7,796 acres, and in 1871 had a population of 775.

TANNADICE,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ABERLEMNO AND OATHLAW.

TANNADICE is a parish situated nearly in the centre of the county, extending about twelve miles in length, and by four to eight in breadth, five and a half miles north from Forfar, its post town, and eight miles west from Brechin, separating on the east and north-east the parish of Tannadice from those of Carston, Fearn, and Navar, and the sides which contain the obtuse angle separating the parish on the s.e., s.w., and n.w. from the parishes of Aberlemno, Oathlaw, Kirriemuir, and Cortachy. Along the western border of the parish passes the South Esk river, and on the eastern side courses the Noran water; on the banks of these streams the water is finely enclosed, cultivated, and planted, and exhibits a variety of romantic scenes. The village of Tannadice is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Esk, seven and a half miles west from Brechin. Acreage, 21,828. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,286.

ABERLEMNO parish lies on the banks of the South Esk, and about twelve miles from the sea coast; 5 miles E. from Forfar, its post town, and 6 miles W. from Brechin, bounded on the north by Tannadice and Carston, from which it is separated by the Esk; on the north-east and north by Brechin, on the south-east by Guthrie, and on the south and west by Rescobie. The land is undulating and fertile, and agriculture is pursued with spirit and success. There are several quarries in the parish, which give employment to many of the inhabitants, and from which are obtained good pavement stones and gray slates, large quantities being conveyed by railway from AULD BAR ROAD STATION, which is in this parish. Turin Hill, the highest mountain in the parish, is 800 feet above sea level. In the parish churchyard, which is about six miles south-west from Brechin, is an antique obelisk, covered with hieroglyphics and also a little to the north of the parish church are three antique obelisks, two of which are also covered by hieroglyphics, which are supposed to have been erected to commemorate a signal victory obtained over the Danes near this place. Antiquarians, however, are not agreed as to the design for which they were erected. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about two miles north east from the church are also the ruins of Melgund Castle, which is supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vitrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the parish church. Acreage, 8,914. Population in 1871, 1,007.

OATHLAW, or FINHAVEN, is a parish four miles north from Forfar, its post town, situated on the south bank of the South Esk. Its length from east to west is about six miles, and its greatest breadth about three miles; it is bounded on the north by Tannadice, and on the east by Aberlemno, on the south by Rescobie, and on the west by Kirriemuir. The hill of Finhaven, with its "vitrified fort," is about three miles from the parish church, and is about 500 feet above sea level. It has much attracted the attention of antiquarians of late, but the mode of its construction and the use for which it was designed and the era to which it belongs still remain a mystery. Situated about 1½ miles east of the church is the castle of Finhaven, now in ruins, once the residence of the Earl of Lindsay and Crawford. The handsome mansion of Henry Campbell-Bannerman, Esq., M.P., is situated near the ruins of this ancient castle. There are quarries of excellent freestone in the parish. Acreage 5,374. Population in 1871, 452.

POST OFFICE, TANNADICE; Elizabeth Whamond, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at half-past nine morning and are despatched thereto at eleven morning.

Post Office, ABERLEMNO, Andrew Davidson, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Forfar) at five minutes before ten morning and are despatched thereto at half-past eleven morning.

The nearest Money Order Office is at FORFAR.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies in the south-eastern part of Scotland; bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth on the east by that strait and also by the North Sea, on the south by Berwickshire, and on the west by Edinburghshire, Mid Lothian; from east to west it extends twenty-six miles; from north to south, at the middle, sixteen—at the east end it is not more than ten miles across, and at the west end about twelve; its surface presents an area of about two hundred and eighty square miles, or 179,142 statute acres.

THE EARLY HISTORY of this county is so intimately connected with that of Edinburgh as to render unnecessary a lengthened recurrence to this subject. The Saxons denominated the whole country lying along the sea and the Forth Lothian; afterwards it was divided into three parts, called, from their relative situation to each other, East Lothian, Mid Lothian, and West Lothian. In 1020, this district, with other parts of the Lothians, was ceded to Malcolm II. In succeeding centuries the shire suffered the horrors of pillage and conflagration on all occasions of the armies of England being sent to invade the country, or to molest or punish the capital. In 1296, and again in 1650, the sanguinary battles of Dunbar were fought within the county; and in the critical year of 1745, it was the scene of the conflict at Prestonpans, since which period it has enjoyed almost uninterrupted repose and tranquility.

SOIL AND SURFACE, PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—In point of soil, cultivation, and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland; and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The greatest elevations in East Lothian, above the level of the sea, are Traprain Law, 700 feet; North Berwick Law, 940, and Shartleton Hill, 1,615. During the reigns of David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion the acreage of this county was in the possession of only a few barons, who at their pleasure disposed of not only the lands but the men who lived upon them, without hindrance. In these times the kings, the nobles, and the churchmen were all tillers of the soil; and in this district every manor had its hamlet, its church, its mill, its kiln, and its brewhouse. The monks, indeed, were indefatigable husbandmen, and by their labour and skill gave the county its first character for agriculture. In this point of view, it may be divided into four districts. The first is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil. The second is a ride of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river and partly towards the coast, land; it comprehends a great proportion of the arable land of the county. The third consists of a tract varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the mountains nearly the whole extent of the county. The fourth comprises an extensive range of mountains which commences at the south-west extremity of the shire, and terminates in a high promontory called Saint Abb's Head; the greater part of this is moor, but some spots between the hills are kept under a regular rotation of crops. Having near two sides begirt by the sea, the county derives a great part of its beauty and opulence from this circumstance. So commodious has nature disposed the surface of East Lothian into ranges of hills and fertile dales, that some tourists, from topographical retrospection, have declared Haddingtonshire to be the Northampton of Great Britain. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the twelfth century; and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the thirteenth—the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton Castle, having subsisted on the peas which grew in the adjacent fields. The thriving state of the agriculture of this county in the fourteenth century is noticed by Fordun. He says, in 1386, East Lothian was embroiled in warfare, and its field operations impeded by the outrage committed by Alan, of Wyntown, in carrying off by violence one of the daughters of the Earl of Seton; and, he adds, that so great was the ferment upon this occasion, that the labour of a hundred ploughs was suspended during a whole year. The fertility of East Lothian in the seventeenth century is ascertained by a passage in "Whitelock's Memoirs," where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland in 1650, were astonished to find in that district "the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw, not one of the fields being fallow." But it is since the period of the Union that in this district particularly, agricultural improvements have manifested themselves extensively and beneficially, and called forth the exertions and science of spirited individuals, proprietors of the soil; they have introduced the best systems of husbandry and employed the most approved implements and machines—have drained, planted, and enclosed, until East Lothian has become one of the most beautiful and productive shires in North Britain. The application of steam power here to the laborious operations of thrashing, &c., present to the eye the aspect of a manufacturing district from the number of tall chimneys which rise in every direction. Exclusive of farming, which is the chief pursuit of the inhabitants, many on the coast are employed in fishing, fish curing, salt-making, and commercial occupations; but manufactures are not extensive in any part of the county; linen and woollen manufactories once existed, but have been long discontinued; the principal articles now exported from East Lothian are corn, whisky ale, porter, coal, earthenware, soap, and fish. The west of the shire abounds with coal; besides which, limestone and red granite constitute the chief mineral substances.

RIVERS, &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynningham, where it forms a bay. The shire is destitute of natural lakes, but this deficiency seems no way injurious to the district, and is amply made up by the Frith of Forth, which yields a large supply of fish. The North British Railway passes through the county and possesses stations in all the principal towns; there are also one or two branches diverging from it.

Haddingtonshire comprises twenty-three complete parishes and two parts of parishes, and three royal burghs—Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick; these join with Lauder (in Bewickshire) and Jedburgh (in Roxburghshire) in sending one member to Parliament and the county at large returns another. The present member for the county is the Right Honourable Lord Elcho. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-2 numbered 1,058. The Lord-Lieutenant of the county is the Earl of Haddington. According to the census returns for 1871, the entire county contained a population of 18,076 males and 19,695 females; total, 37,771; in 1881 the number were: males, 18,766; females, 19,706; total, 38,472, showing an increase in the ten years of 701. The number of inhabited houses at the last-named date was 8,188; uninhabited, 1,043; building 45.

ABERLADY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THE parish of ABERLADY lies S.E. of the south coast of the mouth of the Frith of Forth; it is very fertile, and contains an area of six square miles. It is bounded on the south by Gladsmuir and Haddington, and on the east also by the latter parish and Dirleton. The beach here presents such facilities for the disembarkation of an invading force, that in the course of the last war, when Britain was menaced with an invasion by France, serious apprehensions were entertained by all the southern districts of Scotland that the enterprising Bonaparte might have thought proper to select it as one of the chief points of attack, in order to divide the operations of the British. The village is situated 15 miles W. from Edinburgh, 5½ W.N.W. from Haddington, and 4¼ S. from Dirleton, at the head of a long, flat, sandy beach, and at the mouth of the small river Peffer. James VI., by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant, it is said, was confirmed by Charles I., in 1683, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are not manifest at the present day. The Earl of Wemyss and March is patron of the parish. The seat of this nobleman, Gosford House, stands nearly a mile south-west of the village. The edifice, which is surrounded by beautiful enclosed grounds, contains a valuable collection of rare paintings, which are shown in a liberal and courteous manner to visitors. About half a mile from Aberlady, on the north-east, is Luffness House, a mansion belonging to H. W. Hope, Esq., built in 1549, as a fortification, by the French general De Thermes, for the purpose of aweing the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English. The parish church is a neat structure, and the public school a well-conducted institution. Acreage, 4,819. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,022; and in 1881, 1,000; and of the village, 488.

ATHELSTANEFORD AND DREM.

ATHELSTANEFORD parish lies on the north-east boundary of Haddington, and is separated on the north by Dirleton from the mouth of the Forth; the small village lies within 5½ miles S.E. from North Berwick, 5 S.E. from Aberlady, and 3 N.E. from Haddington. DREM, 2½ miles distant, is a station on the North British line. It contains a neat and modern church and a parochial school. The parish possesses considerable interest from the circumstance of having as ministers successively, in the early part of the last century, two men of eminent poetical genius—Blair, author of "The Grave," and Home, author of "Douglas," to whose memory the inhabitants, assisted by the subscriptions of others, have erected a handsome monument in the centre of the village. The manse occupied by the first mentioned stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard. The site is now comprised in the minister's garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On the author of "Douglas" leaving his pastoral charge, which he did from disgust at the proceedings instituted against him by the presbytery and kirk in general, for the publication of so secular a work, he built and retired to an elegant mansion in the neighbourhood, still exhibited as a pattern of his taste. DREM is a village in this parish. Population of the parish in 1871, 844, and in 1881, 762.

DIRLETON,

WITH GULLANE, FENTON, KINGSTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DIRLETON, one of the neatest rural villages in this county, and perhaps in Scotland, is 20 miles E.N.E. from Edinburgh, 7 N. from Haddington, 4½ N.E. from Aberlady, and nearly 3 W. from North Berwick, charmingly seated at the head of a low meadow, extending about a mile and a half towards the sea; the houses, which for the most part are built in a plain, neat Gothic style, have tastefully arranged gardens, nearly surrounding an extensive triangular green, interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space stands the venerable and magnificent ruin of Dirleton Castle, embosomed among evergreens, and its massive towers richly clothed with ivy. The origin of this castle is lost in the darkness of the middle ages; it is ascertained, however, to have belonged to a noble family in the ninth century, named De Vallebus or De Vaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I. in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century this castle and the estate bestowed the title of the Earl of Dirleton on the Halyburton family. From ancient documents it would appear that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton, but little is known of its character or site. The present parish church, which stands a little below the green, is a handsome erection, bearing date 1661, and considerably enlarged in 1825; it has a substantial square tower. In 1854 a handsome new Gothic open roof was constructed, and the whole woodwork stained and varnished, adding much to its beauty. The parish school stands near the church. The parish, which extends about six miles in length by four and a half in breadth, and embraces 9,146 acres, is low, and with the exception of a sandy strip along the shore which is used as a rabbit warren, is fertile to a degree, and not surpassed by any district in East Lothian, yielding excellent green crops and pasture. Besides Dirleton, the parish contains three other villages, namely GULLANE, FENTON and KINGSTON. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,410, and in 1881, 1,506, and of the village 403.

GULLANE is a small but respectable village, of rather ancient aspect, two miles south-west from Dirleton. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by act of Parliament to Dirleton, at the same time changing the name of the parish to its present appellation. On the east side of the Links stands the ruins of the ancient kirk, which was dedicated to St. Andrew, and was well endowed. On the small bleak island of Fidra, lying off this coast, was an ecclesiastical structure, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague, and its windows acted as beacons to the mariner at night, in warning him of the dangers of an unsafe shore. The Links in the vicinity of Gullane are the habitations of vast numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren at a considerable rent; the markets of Edinburgh are supplied with great quantities annually from the burrows here. The downs of this neighbourhood have long been celebrated for rearing and training race or fine riding horses. Within the last few years the Links of Gullane have become a favourite resort of the lovers of the ancient game of golf, and it is also rising into importance as a resort for summer visitors.

DUNBAR,

WITH BELHAVEN, EAST BARNS, WEST BARNS, SPOTT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNBAR is a royal burgh and sea-port, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its parish and of the eastern part of the district of East Lothian; 28 miles E. from Edinburgh, 11 E. from Haddington, and 31 N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed; occupying a slightly elevated piece of ground on the shore of the North Sea, and the North British Railway passes on the south side of the town, where there is a handsome station. Dunbar, at a very early period, was considered a place of strength and commercial importance; but there was no harbour of any size, until Oliver Cromwell, by a grant of £300 began or promoted the construction of one, which now forms the east pier of the present harbour; in 1820 it was improved by the addition of a good dry and graving dock; this, however, having become useless was filled up many years ago—large stores are now erected upon the site for the accommodation of the Messrs. Annandale, of Beltnaford Paper Works. About 1842, a new harbour, called by the permission of her Majesty Victoria Harbour, was built at the joint expense of the town and Fishery Board, and was about 20 years after repaired and greatly extended. It occupies a space of about 5 acres, and affords ample accommodation to the vessels and boats frequenting Dunbar for fishing purposes. On the west side of the harbour, and within high water mark, stand the venerable ruins of a castle which in former ages, must have been very considerable; it is based upon rocks, but the date of its erection cannot be conjectured; it was always considered a place of great defensive consequence, as a key to Scotland on the east border; and it has often been besieged, and as often bravely defended. In this castle Edward II. took refuge after his defeat at Bannockburn; and to this secure asylum Bothwell fled, and left the unfortunate Mary in the hands of the associated lords after the disastrous rencontre at Carberry Hill; its successful defence in 1337 by Black Agnes, Countess of Dunbar, against the English is one of the most memorable events in Scottish history; it was subsequently demolished by the order of the Scottish Parliament, and nothing but dilapidated fragments of this once almost impregnable fortress are now visible, and these have been much reduced by the excavations for Victoria harbour. On a columnar rocky projection, between these ruins and the harbour was the battery; this has been abandoned by Government, and it is now used as a hospital for fever patients. The town is built upon a gentle rise from the beach; the principal street is wide and spacious, and the chief thoroughfares are macadamised; the streets and shops are lighted with gas; and a good supply of soft water is conveyed to the town, from a distance of two miles, by means of pipes. In High street are a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, and several insurance agency offices, and there is on a prominent site at the south end a handsome place of worship in connection with the Free Church of Scotland. There are several public halls in the town, among which is one erected at the south end called St. Catherine's Hall. The opening of the hall was celebrated by a torch light procession of the Freemasons, Free Gardeners, and Templars, on the 5th January, 1872. There is a spacious room, fitted either for balls or concerts; also three large rooms held respectively by the Freemasons, Free Gardeners, and Templars, as lodge rooms. The accommodation in every respect is excellent. In Westport is a branch of the British Linen Company's bank, and also one of the Bank of Scotland, Limited, and at the shore is the custom house. The houses are generally large, and of pleasing exterior, and few towns present to the stranger a more agreeable and respectable appearance. Dunbar House, formerly the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front faces the sea, and consists of two extensive wings, with a circular centre, forming an elegant elevated portico, supported by handsome corresponding pillars; on the top of the centre, at the back of the edifice, and facing the street, is a finely executed and large proportioned figure of that ideal animal the sphynx, in a couchant position, with the wings erect; the house is now used as a barracks for the militia.

The herring fishery has long been a very considerable source of wealth to Dunbar. Frequently five hundred boats are at the station, and since the opening of the railway, large quantities are sent, in a green state, to the inland counties—sometimes to the extent of from two hundred to three hundred tons a day. A great weight is also cured into white or red herrings, which are then exported to the Baltic, the Mediterranean, the West Indies, and to Ireland; as many as ten thousand barrels have been cured here in one season. Cod fishing is likewise a profitable pursuit here; the produce is mostly despatched to meet the London demand; and Edinburgh is also a market for white fish, lobsters, &c. in great supply from this port. The district around Dunbar is one of the richest and best cultivated in Scotland, and produces a much greater supply than is required by the inhabitants. The chief exports are corn, fish, and potatoes, and the imports coal and timber. The manufactures of Dunbar were at one period numerous and extensive; the most important branch now in operation is fish curing, comprising several extensive concerns. The domestic trade furnishes all the necessary articles of life, and the shops exhibit a respectable display of useful and fashionable productions. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II., and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI.; it was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk, and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. An Act of Parliament for reducing the number of the municipal corporations in Scotland, has now limited the number of corporate officers in Dunbar to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, and seven councillors. This burgh joins with Jedburgh, Lauder, Haddington, and North Berwick in returning one member to Parliament.

At the southern end of the High street stands the elegant parish church, the erection of which was commenced (on the site of the old kirk) in the summer of the year, 1819, and it was opened on the 16th of September, 1821. Its architectural style is the modern Gothic, and the body of the edifice is very commodious, containing eighteen hundred sittings; a very handsome square tower, with a pinnacle at each corner, embellishes the structure; the entire building is of a rather dark red stone, not unlike brick when seen at a distance, but the quality of the material is considered of superior excellence and durability; the completion of the fabric cost upwards of £8,000. The interior is enriched with a beautiful marble monument to the memory of George Home, lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI., the height of this fine memorial is twenty-six feet, and its breadth twelve; while the church was re-building, the most judicious care was taken not to injure or disturb what is deemed the finest piece of tomb sculpture in Scotland. The United Presbyterians have two places of worship here; the Free Church, the Episcopalians, the Roman Catholics, the Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists each one. The town has the advantage of a good grammar school, wherein all the useful branches of education are taught; a commodious building was erected in 1878 (on the beach near the church), consisting of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre; the eastern wing forms the grammar school, the western wing called the Lamer Street school, being designed for primary education, under a separate master. There are also two ladies' schools in the town. Other institutions, belonging to the burgh and parish, of a praise-worthy nature are well sustained.

The country about Dunbar is exceedingly pleasant, and the prospects from the high grounds, which rise gradually from the sea coasts, are expansive, and present a variety of delightful objects; the most striking of these are the North Berwick Law and Tantallon Castle, the Bass, the Isle of May, the Firth of Forth and the mountains of Angus. The parish of Dunbar extends about eight miles along the coast and embraces an area of 7,497 statute acres. The soil is rich and dry, and produces all kinds of crops, as early as any in Scotland. The market, a bulky one, is held on Tuesday, the grain is all weighed and delivered immediately on being sold. There are two annual fairs—one on the first Tuesday after the 26th of May, the other on the first Tuesday after the 22nd of November. The entire parish contained in 1871 a population of 4,982, and in 1881, 5,894, of the latter number 3,651 were given for the town, including that portion comprised in Belhaven, for which 402 were returned.

BELHAVEN is a remarkably neat village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay of the sea, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of lord to a branch of the family of Hamilton. Belhaven is the principal watering place of Dunbar, and is fast rising into importance, not only on account of the great extent and beauty of the sands for bathing purposes, but also from the erection of villas for the accommodation of visitors. At a short distance from the village are the remains of an ancient British cemetery, and near the beach is a valuable mineral spring, which at one time was a source of great attraction. There are also in the village a church in connection with the Church of Scotland, a brewery, and a school, the latter being especially directed to the training of females for industrial occupations, in addition to all the useful branches of education. Between Belhaven & West Barns are the Seaford Brick and Tile Works; a large quantity of drainage tiles are manufactured here, and on account of their superior quality find a ready market, not only in this district, but are also sent by rail to the extremity of Berwickshire, and shipped extensively to the northern ports of Scotland. Population returned with Dunbar.

EAST BARNs is a village in Dunbar parish, about three miles south-east from that town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village there is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

WEST BARNs, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile west from Belhaven. In this village, on the river Biel, are extensive corn and flour mills; there is also a brewery, a manufactory for agricultural implements, and the extensive paper mills of Messrs. A. Annandale and Sons. Here also is the Board school of Dunbar, an excellently conducted and numerously attended institution. Population of the village in 1871, 585, and in 1881, 449.

SPOTT is a small rural village in the parish of that name, situated two miles south from Dunbar. The parish is of an irregular figure, being about five miles in length by two in breadth, and includes an acreage of 7,583. The low country is well enclosed and cultivated and the higher grounds afford good pasture. Spott House, in this parish, is romantically perched upon a rock, rising from a low glen surrounded with beautiful pleasure grounds. In this neighbourhood was fought on the 3rd of September, 1650, the battle of Doonhill (so decisively unfortunate to the royal cause), in which the Scotch forces were totally routed by Cromwell. The parish contained in 1871 a population of 560, and in 1881, 565.

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY,
ON THE NORTH BRITISH LINE.

Station, East End—David Bruce, station master

EAST LINTON IN PRESTONKIRK,

GARVALD AND BARO, STENTON, WHITEKIRK AND TYNNINGHAME, AND WHITTINGHAME.

EAST LINTON is a village in the parish of Prestonkirk and a burgh by the adoption of the Police (Scotland) Act, 1862, 22 miles s. from Edinburgh, 6 s.e. from North Berwick, 6 w. from Dunbar, and 5 e. from Haddington, eligibly situated on the left bank of the Tyne.

The parish church is at Preston, about half a mile north-east from East Linton; in the latter are an United Presbyterian chapel, a Free church, and a public school. The parish of Prestonkirk measures about four miles each way, and comprises 7,058 acres; the surface is agreeably varied, and the soil fertile and well cultivated. The North British line of Railway passes through the village and has a station here. There is a handsome and commodious Combination Poorhouse. About a mile south-west of Linton are the ruins of Hailes Castle, noted as having been one of the residences of Mary and Bothwell; and one mile north of the village is the elegant mansion of Smeaton. From the southern part of the parish rises the mountain of Traprain Law to the height of seven hundred feet above the level of the sea. A market or meeting is held at East Linton every Monday during the harvest season for hiring reapers. A very important cattle market is held here annually in October. In 1871, the parish of Prestonkirk contained a population of 1,981, and in 1881, 1,928.

GARVALD AND BARO, an united parish, is bounded by Morham and Whittingham on the north and east, and by Gifford on the west, extending from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammermoor hills to the borders of Berwickshire. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the ruins of Nunraw, a nunnery once of great importance, now the residence and property of Walter Wingate Gray, Esq. The village of Garvald, a nice sequestered rural little place, is seated in a fertile valley on the banks of the small river Papanza, which a little lower is called Biel water, 22 miles s.e. from Edinburgh, 8½ s.w. from Dunbar, 5 s. from Linton, and nearly 6 s.e. from Haddington. Acreage, 13,442. The population of the parish in 1871 was 832, and in 1881, 758, and of the village, 805.

STENTON is a parish and small village, the latter situated four miles and a half east from East Linton. The principal object of attraction in the parish is a beautiful artificial serpentine piece of water about a mile south of the village; it is nearly two miles in length and averages about four hundred yards in breadth, though in some places it is double the latter proportion, and in others much narrower. Its course is so sinuous that the stranger can form no just idea of its length; its banks are high, steep and well clothed with wood, and the scenery throughout the meanderings of the lake is of a delightful and picturesque character. By the urbanity and kindness of the proprietress, Lady Mary C. N. Hamilton, of Archerfield and Biel, parties are allowed to ramble through the grounds and plantations, or make excursions upon the lake, the accommodation of boats for the purpose being provided. In 1871, the parish contained a population of 612, and in 1881, 608; it comprises an area of 7,676 acres.

WHITEKIRK is a very small village in the united parish of Whitekirk and Tynninghame, four miles north from Linton; it consists of but a few humble dwellings, the ancient parish church and manse, and the public school.

Two miles from Linton and the same from Whitekirk is TYNNINGHAME village, also inconsiderable both in size and population. Tynninghame House, the elegant family seat of the Earl of Haddington, is half a mile from the village, enchantingly environed by woods and walks of superlative beauty, at the head of a park sloping gently southward to the Tyne, near its mouth. In 1871 Whitekirk and Tynninghame contained a population of 1,073, and in 1881, 1,051.

WHITTINGHAME is an extensive parish reaching from the borders of Berwickshire a length of eleven miles northward, but varying in breadth from six to four miles, and still narrower in the middle, comprising 15,595 acres. In the northern division of the parish are the beautiful pleasure grounds and plantations surrounding the fine mansion of Whittinghame, the seat of Arthur James Balfour, Esq. M.P. The village, a very small one, is three miles south from the village of Linton and six east from Haddington. In 1871 this parish had a population of 657, and in 1881, 639.

FALA AND SOUTRA, WITH HUMBLE AND BLACKSHIELDS.

FALA and SOUTRA is an united parish, the first of which is within the eastern border of Edinburghshire, the other in the county of Haddington. The villages of Fala and Fala-dam are situated on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, about fourteen miles from the former, and eleven from Haddington. The parish comprehends part of the Lammermoor ridge, of which Soutra hill is the north-west point. From the foot of the hill the surface is nearly level, having a tolerably fertile soil; and the lands are in a high state of cultivation. The kirk of Fala stands on an eminence overhanging the road. BLACKSHIELDS is a small village in this parish, the population of which was in 1871, 864.

The parish of HUMBLE lies in the south-western part of Haddingtonshire; bounded by Salton and Ormiston on the north, part of Bolton and Gifford on the east, and Fala and Soutra on the west. It is five miles in length, by rather more than three in breadth, lying chiefly on the Lammermoor range of hills near Berwickshire. The high lands are pastoral; but the low grounds are well enclosed and cultivated. Ironstone and coal are said to lie under the surface of some parts, but neither has been wrought. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a parochial school are in the parish, which encloses an area of 9,816 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 967.

GIFFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

GIFFORD is a respectable village, and the capital of the parish of Yester, 20 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 9 S.E. from Tranent, and 4 S.E. from Haddington; charmingly situated on a rivulet, tributary to the Tyne. The village, which is well built, consists of two spacious streets of unequal length, one end of the longest being ornamented with a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction, and terminates at Yester House, the noble family mansion of the Marquis of Tweeddale, whose example and fostering influence has accomplished so much in advancing the agriculture of Scotland. The parish church stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and the parochial school at the north end of the longer one; the former, which was erected in 1708, contains a pulpit of oak, of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called Knox's pulpit, so called from this celebrated preacher having been, it is said, born in Gifford, but which circumstance is denied by very creditable authorities, and the honour bestowed upon Haddington. The scenery around here is very picturesque. Fairs are held here on the first Tuesday in March, the third Tuesday in June, and the first Tuesday in October; and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold a meeting here annually, on the first Tuesday in October, for the show of rams. The population of the parish of Yester in 1871 was 1,084, and in 1881, 924.

WITH THE VILLAGE OF BOLTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HADDINGTON is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the county town of East Lothian, and the capital of the parish of its name, 17 miles E. from Edinburgh, 88 N.W. from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 W. from Dunbar, and 9½ S. from North Berwick; eligibly and pleasantly situated on the left bank of the river Tyne, and is the terminus of a branch line from the North British Railway. Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion), dated 1173, she styled it Morum Burgum de Haddington. The suburb of the town, called Nungate, derives its name from a nunnery founded by Ada, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town. It was in this abbey or nunnery that a parliament was convened on the 7th of July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary to the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. At the east end of Nungate street is seen the roofless ruin of St. Martin's Church, which has been but little used since the Reformation. The town has suffered severely at different periods by conflagrations and inundations; in 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1558 whole villages were swept away by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, when, it is related by a monkish chronicle, "a nun seized the statue of the Virgin, and threatened to throw it into the flood unless she (Mary) protected her house from destruction;" whereupon the waters gradually retired within their ordinary banks. The last great conflagration, which was accidental, occurred about two hundred years ago, by the carelessness of a nurserymaid. The 4th of October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne 17 feet, at which it continued for several hours; a plate recording this occurrence is placed at the east corner of High street. Considering the great antiquity of this burgh, it may be justly styled handsome. The streets, which are spacious, are gas lighted by a company formed in 1835, whose works are erected at the west end of the town, in which quarter conspicuously stand the County Buildings, the architecture of which is of the old English style; they contain sheriff and justice of the peace court-rooms, with appropriate offices, and jury and witness rooms; the erection of this building cost £5,470. The Town's Buildings, to which was added in 1831 a fine spire, 170 feet in height, at an expense of about £1,500, may be recognised as another feature of improvement to the burgh; they comprise the burgh council room, assembly and public reading room, and the gaol. This pile, which evidently has been erected at different periods, forms the extreme western end of that long range of buildings separating the spacious High street from the equally wide Market street. In the Corn Exchange, opened 29th September, 1854, is held one of the most animated grain markets in the kingdom. The County Lunatic Asylum (opened in 1866) stands a short distance from the town, and is a spacious edifice. The suburb of Nungate is approached across the Tyne by the Waterloo bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; as also by another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches. The corporation of this burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors; they hold a court every Monday. A sheriff and commissary court sit every Thursday; one for small debts every alternate Thursday; a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday in March, May, and August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter sessions on the second Thursday in January. Haddington unites with Dunbar, Jedburgh, Lauder, and North Berwick in returning one member to Parliament.

The trade of Haddington consists principally in corn; on the market days immense quantities are brought for sale, and it is considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. The present manufactures comprise sackling, coach building, and agricultural implements; there is also an extensive brewery, two iron foundries, tanneries, two cloth mills, and two corn mills. Four banking establishments diffuse monetary accommodation—a branch of the British Linen Company, the Bank of Scotland, Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. An agricultural society was instituted in Haddington long since, and another at Salton; they were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums nearly £300; the Marquis of Tweeddale is patron.

The parish church is a venerable and capacious structure; from its architecture and some traditional records it is supposed to have been erected about the twelfth or thirteenth century; the west end is the only portion now used, in the repair and improvement of which nearly £6,000 was expended in 1811; the east end of the ancient monastery and the old square tower are now a ruin; in a corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Lauderdale family, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or "Lennox Love," at present the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Blantyre; and in the aisle there are many statues of the Lauderdale succession, large as life, reclining on beds of state. The designations of the other structures for divine worship, with their respective localities and ministers, are given in a subsequent page. The charitable institutions are numerous, and highly creditable to the burgh, as are the educational establishments; and several societies and clubs are established on the most respectable footing, for various laudable objects. A school has recently been erected called "The Knox Institute." Haddington lays claim to the honour of being the natal place of that unbending reformer, John Knox, and the house where it is contended he was born was not long since generally pointed out in Gifford gate; the village of Gifford, however, contests this claim.

The weekly market is held on Friday; the sale of oats commences at twelve, barley at twenty minutes past twelve, beans and peas at a quarter to one, and wheat at one. A cattle fair is held in October, and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here for the show of stock, implements, seed, &c.; for the show of seed corn in February and October, of stock in March, and roots and poultry in December. Population of the burgh in 1871, 4,007 and in 1881, 4,042.

Bolton is a parish and village—the latter, a small one, is situated on the road from Haddington to East Salton, three miles south-west from the former. About the close of the fifteenth century the lands of Bolton were wrongfully seized by the Hepburns, one of which infamous family, John Hepburn, was executed as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief in the murder of Darnley. The church and the public school are both in the village; the former is a handsome substantial erection, in the modern Gothic style, ornamented with a square tower; the latter is a well built and judiciously conducted institution.

INNERWICK AND OLDHAMSTOCKS.

THE parish of INNERWICK is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east. Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south. It measures ten miles in length, by a breadth varying from two to three, and embraces an area of 13,157 statute acres. The land towards the sea coast is level, and very fertile; inland it rises into gently swelling hills, which are ornamented with a variety of plantations, and the fields are all well enclosed. The village of Innerwick is 30 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 E. from Haddington, and 4 S.E. from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick. The Established church, which was built in 1782, is a neat edifice, and stands on a judiciously selected site, close by the village; there is also a Free church, situated about half a mile from the village, about a mile west of which is the modern and handsome mansion of Mr. Richard Hunter, of Thurston; and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of the castle of that name. The situation of the ruins is rather secluded; they stand on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divides the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons, of Innerwick, was besieged, taken, and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. There are likewise the remains of several military encampments in the neighbourhood. Population of the parish in 1871, 892; and in 1881, 777.

POST OFFICE, INNERWICK, Jane Brown, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Dunbar) at eleven morning, and are despatched thereto at fifteen minutes before five afternoon, and on Sundays at ten minutes past two afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at DUNBAR.

Post Office, OLDHAMSTOCKS, Mary Ford, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Cockburnspath, in Berwickshire) at ten minutes before one afternoon, and are despatched thereto at thirty minutes past one afternoon.

The nearest Money Order Office is at COCKBURNSPATH.

NORTH BERWICK AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish containing a royal burgh and seaport 23 miles N.E. from Edinburgh, 11 N.W. from Dunbar, and 10 N. from Haddington; situated on a low sandy plain on the shore of the German Ocean, at the entrance of the Frith of Forth, and on a branch of the North British Railway. It consists principally of one long main street, running east and west, another proceeding in a contrary direction towards the sea, and two or three small ones; and on the East and West Links are some houses of a superior kind. The chief trade of Berwick is the export of potatoes, &c.; the imports are coal and bones for manure. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier; but, although there is water enough for a large class of vessels, the rocks render the entrance so difficult that but small ones make the attempt; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. Fiddra roads, about two miles to the west, are considered perfectly safe. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens; and three miles to the east within two miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, the terror of seamen: it is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea; the channel betwixt it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels to and from London and Leith. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides, except by a narrow pass on the south-west, towards the land. A fearful caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chains; it existed as a stronghold for a long period; was a state prison during the reigns of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. The Bass is inhabited by myriads of sea fowl, especially Solan geese. Nearly opposite the Bass, and about three miles east of Berwick, are the interesting ruins of Tantallon Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of "Marmion." About a quarter of a mile south-west are seen the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by David I. for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns; and not far distant rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is six hundred feet above the level of the sea.

The date of the first charter, erecting Berwick into a royal burgh, is unknown, that instrument having been lost or destroyed, James VI., however, granted to it a writ confirmatory of all its former privileges, by which it is governed by two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. The burgh joins with Haddington, Dunbar, Lauder, and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament. The Sheriff's Small Debt Courts are held quarterly, and the Justice of Peace Courts when necessary. There are four churches and several good schools in the town. There are two first-class hotels here, viz., the Marine and the Royal; the former a noble edifice, erected at a cost of £20,000, is in the Scottish baronial style of architecture, and contains upwards of 100 apartments. The population of the parish in 1871, was 2,573, and in 1881, 2,686, the parliamentary burgh at the latter time having 1,698.

POST OFFICE, High Street, Peter Brodie, Post Master.—Letters arrive from south and east of England, foreign, and all parts of Scotland at seven and eleven morning; and from England, Scotland, and all parts at a quarter before six evening.

Letters are despatched to Edinburgh, Glasgow, and south of Scotland at fifteen minutes before nine morning; to England, Ireland, foreign, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and south of Scotland at thirty-five minutes past one afternoon; to England, Ireland, Scotland, and all parts at twenty minutes past six evening; on Sundays to all parts at five minutes before two afternoon.

PRESTONPANS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PRESTON, COCKENZIE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PRESTONPANS is a market and post town, and burgh of barony, 9 miles E. from Edinburgh, 14 s.w. from North Berwick, 9½ w.n.w. from Haddington, and 3 E. from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Frith of Forth; and the North British Railway passes about a half a mile to the south. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, without any public buildings worthy of particular notice. It is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour is situated a little to the westward of the town, and is called Morison Haven; it has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks, and other articles made from fire-clay, common bricks and tiles, soap and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also the extensive brewery of Messrs. John Fowler and Co. Limited, whose superior ales and beer have for a long time received a wide-spread reputation. Oysters are taken in the Forth, near the town, and considerable quantities are sent to the markets of Edinburgh, Newcastle, and even to London. The mines of coal are very rich in this neighbourhood; a seam of this valuable mineral is now being worked by the Prestongrange Coal and Iron Company, Limited, within two hundred yards of the quay at Morison Haven. The seam is eight to ten feet in thickness, beneath which it is ascertained there exist eight or nine other strata, making an aggregate body of workable coal of full forty feet; the roof of this mine is composed of a stratum of fire-clay from two to three feet thick, and a band of ironstone of six inches in thickness. The mines extend a considerable distance under the sea; that of the Preston Links Colliery, situated at the east end of the town, has already been driven some hundreds of yards beyond high water mark. There are other collieries in the neighbourhood wrought successfully. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter; a suburb called "Knittle," or more properly Cuthil, the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally to the abbey of Newbattle; this division is possessed by Sir G. G. Suttie, Bart., who is also a patron of the parish, which is one of the smallest in the county.

The places of worship are the parish church and a Free church; a public school, and some benefit societies are in the town; the principal charity, however, is Schaw's Hospital at Preston village an extensive building, erected in 1831, in the old English style of architecture, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of the funds bequeathed by its benevolent founder, Dr. Schaw, in 1781. The institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of twenty-one boys children of indigent parents—those of the name of Schaw, McNeil, Cunningham and Stewart, having a preference of entry; the establishment is conducted by a governor and matron. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, Drummore, Northfield and Preston Lodge. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons, of Preston, is an attractive ruin. At the distance of a mile and a half from the town, at a hamlet called Meadow Hill, was fought the battle to which the name Prestonpans has been appended, on the 21st of September, 1745, between the adherents of the Stewart family and the English troops under the command of General Cope, in which the latter were routed. In this engagement fell Colonel Gardiner, to whose memory a handsome monument has been erected; the house (Bankton House), once occupied by this revered officer, and in which he expired after the battle, stands a little to the west of Meadow hill, and is still pointed out to the enquiring stranger. In the main street is a handsome monument to the memory of the late Thomas Alexander, c.n. director general of the medical department of the British army. The markets were held on Wednesdays and Saturdays; but Friday is now acknowledged as the market day. The parish has an area of 1,291 acres, and its population in 1871 was 2,069, and in 1881, 2,550.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village in the parish of Tranent, one mile east from Prestonpans, situated on the road leading to North Berwick and the shore of the Frith of Forth. It has a small harbour, substantially constructed by Mr. Cadell, for shipping coal. A new harbour was opened in September, 1880, by Lord Elcho, at a cost of £11,000, mainly subscribed by the fishermen. A very handsome school and schoolmaster's house, the gift of a liberal donor, are situated in the village. A fair is held here on the first Thursday in November. Population in 1871, 1,221, and in 1881, 1,612.

POST OFFICE, PRESTONPANS, Margaret Whyte, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from Edinburgh and all parts at fifteen minutes past eight and half-past eleven morning and half-past seven evening; and are despatched to Edinburgh at five minutes before seven morning and two afternoon; and to Edinburgh and all parts at seven evening.

Wall Box, DRYSDALE'S LAND. Hours of collection: Ten minutes before two afternoon and six and at fifteen minutes past eight evening.

Post Office, COCKENZIE, John Bathgate, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Prestonpans) at fifteen minutes past nine morning and twenty minutes past eight evening, and are despatched thereto at ten morning, six and at twenty-five minutes past eight evening.

The nearest Money Order Office is at PRESTONPANS.

SALTON (EAST AND WEST), PENCAITLAND,

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SALTON parish lies chiefly in a fine fertile valley on the north side of the Lammermoor hills; is well enclosed and cultivated, and various parts of the district are embellished with thriving plantations. The village of EAST SALTON, a respectable one, is situated 15 miles s.e. from Edinburgh, 5 s.w. from Haddington, and the same distance s.e. from Tranent. The parish church, which stands in the village, was almost entirely re-built in 1805 in the modern Gothic style, and cruciform, having a fine spire ninety feet high. The celebrated Bishop Burnet had Salton for his first benefice, and for some years performed the duties of parish minister; and it was here that he used the only book of common prayer known to have existed in the Episcopal Church of Scotland during the reign of Charles II. This eminent churchman and historian bequeathed a valuable library to the parish, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing, and apprenticing thirty poor children; the proceeds of the bequests amount now to about £96 per annum. The small river Salton and the Tyne are boundary streams of the parish which has abundance of excellent lime. WEST SALTON, in the same parish is about half a mile from East Salton; between the two villages is Salton Hall, an elegant mansion, the residence of John Fletcher, Esq. In the village is a good school house, erected in 1803, where the children admitted under Bishop Burnet's charity are instructed. The population of the parish, which embraces an area of 3,812 statute acres, was in 1871, 617; and in 1881, 574.

PENCAITLAND is a rural village and parish; the former is situated two miles and a half north-west from East Salton, the latter being divided into two nearly equal parts by the river Tyne. This district forms the eastmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians; the coal here is of an excellent quality, lying about fifty-six yards deep, in a nearly horizontal stratum of two feet nine inches thick; an inferior coal is, however, obtained at only sixteen yards below the surface. Besides coal, the parish abounds in good limestone and freestone; there is also a substantially-built school house, and an ancient cross. About half a mile to the north-west is Winton Castle, an extensive pile, partly ancient and partly modern, formerly the residence of the Earls of Winton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715. Fountain Hall, the seat of Sir Thomas North Dick Lauder, Bart., and Tyneholm House, are also handsome mansions in this parish. On the eastern side of the river, which is crossed by an old stone bridge, stands the parish church. The population of the parish, the area of which is 5,075 statute acres, was in 1871, 1,320; and in 1881, 1,107.

TRANENT,

GLADSMUIR WITH PENSTON, ORMISTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TRANENT, a town and post village in the parish of that name, is 10 miles s. from Edinburgh, 18 w. from Dunbar, and 7 w. from Haddington; situated on the main road from the latter town to the Scottish metropolis, at the head of elevated ground; the North British Railway passes about a mile to the east. The town consists of a street running from the west to east along the line of the public road, with another diverging from about the middle of it. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the very first discovery of coal in Scotland; others are occupied in agriculture, and on the coast, which bounds the northern extremity of the parish. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established in the town. The church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice, with a square tower; Colonel Gardiner, who fell in the battle of Prestonpans, was interred in it. There is also a Free church, erected in 1814; the United Presbyterians have a handsome chapel, built in 1826, and handsome schools have lately been erected. Half a mile below the town, to the north-east, is Stiell's Institution, a neat and extensive structure, built in 1820, formerly a hospital, but now an endowed school. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, once a baronial residence; and in another part of the parish are the ruins of Waterfalls Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once collegiate church. The population of the parish in 1871 was 4,853, and in 1881, 5,197.

INVERNESS-SHIRE.

THIS is a very extensive county, being the first in Scotland in magnitude, though only ranking the tenth in population; it is bounded on the north by the counties of Ross and Cromarty; on the east by those of Nairn and Moray—the Frith of the latter also touching it on this quarter; on the south are the shires of Perth and Argyle, with a small part of Aberdeen; and the Atlantic Ocean washes its western boundary; a small insulated district between the shires of Banff and Moray belongs to it, and several of the Hebrides are politically attached to it. The county (excluding the isles) extends in length, from the point of Arisaig on the west to that of Ardersier on the east, about ninety-two miles, and its greatest breadth is over fifty miles. The whole surface comprises 4,054 square miles of land, and one hundred and ninety of lakes. Taking the computed number of acres at 8,000,000, little more than one-tenth is cultivated. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengary, Glenmoriston, Glenshiel, &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum, and Canna; besides a number of islets.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The greater part of the surface of this county consists of lofty mountains, which, especially towards the west, tower above each other in stupendous magnificence. It would be vain to attempt a particular description of the scenery to be met with in this great county, comprehending, as already mentioned, so many mountains, between all of which are deep glens of boundless variety and beauty, each having its stream and its lake, and many shrouded in woods. One of the mountains is, nevertheless, too conspicuous to pass over in silence—the noble and celebrated Ben Nevis, the highest elevation in Great Britain, soaring to the height of 4,376 feet above the level of Loch Linnhe. This remarkable eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea; from its summit, in clear weather, a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland, from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and is toilsome in the ascent. It consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain; it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. Being cleft in many places to the very base, by ravines and glens, its precipices are of prodigious altitude; one of them, the inaccessible eyrie of eagles, is nearly 500 feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name; it was at the opening of this valley that the Marquis of Minto achieved the brilliant victory of Inverchury. The other remarkable eminences are Melfourvie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig-Phadrig, 1,150 feet respectively above the level of the sea. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south-west to north-west, parallel to the Grampians. This valley is called Glen-more-nai' Alabin, or the "Great Glen of Albin," and appears to be a deep continuous rent between the chains of enormous mountains which range in the same direction; through the greater part of its length the glen is filled with water, or rather an almost connected succession of lakes, not rising very considerably above the level of the sea—a circumstance which suggested the comprehensive plan of forming the Caledonian Canal; of that stupendous undertaking we shall have occasion to speak hereafter. On the eastern side of the county, agriculture is conducted with as much skill, spirit, and success as in any district northward of the Grampians; in the interior, and on the western coast it languishes under the natural obstructions of soil and climate. Along the whole of the western division the climate is much more rainy than on the eastern side of the island; it is seldom fair weather in the latter with a westerly wind. On account of these disadvantages, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the management of black cattle and sheep, especially the former; numerous herds of goats are likewise to be found in almost every parish. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer and roe, who roam in safety through seclusions, and lodge in recesses impenetrable to man; the alpine and common hare, and other species of game, are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers. Additional roads were formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of much larger forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey are supposed to be more extensive than all the other natural woods of Scotland if summed together; The trees that grow naturally are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, wild-green, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east or Lowland quarter, where there are to be seen many fine fields yielding good crops of wheat, barley, and oats; potatoes, in several parishes, are produced in great abundance. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, a very improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. In this shire, as in other counties in the north, the removal of the poorer native classes, or small farmers, by the landlords has thinned the population, expatriated thousands, and reduced to the lowest conceivable depths of human suffering those wretched families who have been permitted to remain in rude hamlets on the sea-shore. During the severe winters of 1836-7, and likewise 1846-7, the distress of the more indigent inhabitants of the Highlands (owing to the deplorable failure of their naturally limited crops, the extreme inclemency of the weather, and the almost total destitution of fuel) was of the most appalling description; in the islands more particularly this combination of calamities was experienced to a direful extent. In the Isle of Skye the want of fuel had reduced the unhappy occupants to such a state of desperation that, it has been asserted, lots were cast among a certain number of poor families to decide which should consent to the destruction of their hut for the purpose of furnishing fire-wood for the general good. The case of these poor people excited universal sympathy throughout the kingdom, and subscriptions, headed munificently by London, poured in for their relief; the sum thus promptly raised was very considerable. Among the provincial towns of England, Manchester stood eminently conspicuous in the humane and benevolent work. We now return from this digression to our more general and cheering account of the capabilities of this wide district. The exports of the county may be briefly enumerated in the articles of cattle, wool, and corn; the skins of goats, deer, roes, foxes, hares, and rabbits; salmon, horrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures. The spinning of flax and wool is the occupation of the females, in their respective families, over the whole county. The principal imports will be detailed under the head of INVERNESS. Limestone is everywhere abundant; and in many parts are to be found marble, granite (the latter said to be the most beautiful in the world), and silver, iron, and lead ores.

RIVERS AND LAKES, CANALS AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Frith; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire; the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coltrick, the Glass, the Morriston, the Ennerick, the Kinpie, with others of still minor note; the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of two hundred feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The CALEDONIAN CANAL, before adverted to, is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with the sea on either side of the island by artificial watercourses and locks, and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Frith, to Loch Eil, on the western coast—a distance of about sixty miles. To connect the several lakes by artificial navigation, and thereby the Western Ocean with the North Sea, by the Moray Frith, was an undertaking to which a great portion of the public attention had long been directed; and it was at length commenced by Government in 1803-4. After a persevering labour of about eighteen years, and at an expense of upwards of £800,000, the line was opened for the admission of vessels in 1822; up to 1830, the total expense fell very little short of one million sterling. The canal part is twenty feet deep, fifty feet wide at bottom, and one hundred and ten feet wide at surface—which affords sailing facilities to frigates of thirty-two guns, or merchant vessels of a similar size and draught, &c. Besides the locks, which have been made subservient to this great line of canal navigation, there are others of greater or less magnitude scattered throughout the district; and several arms of the sea advance into the western shore of the county. RAILWAYS have extended their iron influence to this remote county by means of the Highland Railways, which are complete as far north as Thurso and Wick, an important branch of which runs by Dingwall to Ströme Ferry, thus opening a communication with the Isle of Skye.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends twenty-four parishes, and thirteen parts of parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being INVERNESS, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of that name), and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to Parliament; and the county of Inverness returns another representative. The present member for the county is Donald Cameron, Esq. of Lochiel. The parliamentary constituency for 1881-83 numbered 1,914. The lord lieutenant is Lord Lovat.

By the returns presented to the Government in 1871, the entire county contained a population of 40,879 males, and 45,662 females; total, 87,541. In 1881 the numbers stood—males, 43,785; females, 46,639; total, 90,424; showing an increase of 2,883 persons in ten years. The number of inhabited houses in the shire at the last named date was 17,222; uninhabited, 613; building, 114.

ABERNETHY AND KINCARDINE.

ARE two parishes, but united under the first-mentioned name. It is bounded on the north by Duthill and Inverallan; on the east by Kirkmichael, and is separated on the south from Braemar by the celebrated Cairngorm mountain—its length is 15 miles, by a breadth of nearly 12. The river Nethy, from which the name is derived, runs through the parish, and falls into the Spey. There are several lochs—the principal being Loch Avon. Cairngorm mountain is one of the loftiest of the Grampians, being 4,050 feet above the sea level, and 1,760 feet from the surface of Loch Avon, which is a mile from its base. It has obtained great celebrity from having furnished large quantities of a particular species of topaz, but which are now nearly exhausted. There is a handsome hotel, viz., the Abernethy Hotel, where travellers and visitors will find first-class accommodation. In the parish is an Established church, and one for members of the Free church, also several public schools. The Earl of Seafield is patron of the parish. Population in 1871, 1,753; and in 1881, 1,580.

BEAULY,

IN KILMORACK, KILTARLITY, KIRKHILL, TERRADALE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BEAULY is a village in the extensive parish of KILMORACK, 35 miles s.w. from Tain, 12 from Inverness, and 9 s. from Dingwall, standing on the south side of the river of the same name, as it pours into Loch Beaulay, an inner branch of the Moray Frith. The situation of this place is beautiful, from the windings and falls of the river, and general appearance of the surrounding country—and thence its name, Beaulay, that is, "fine place." There is a small harbour, to which vessels of one hundred and fifty tons burthen can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consists of timber, grain, and wool; the imports coal (from England) and lime. In other respects its trade is of a local character. There are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited, established here; and three miles north-east of the town is the Ord distillery, well known for its excellent whisky, of which Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, of Beaulay, is the proprietor. There is a very handsome Roman Catholic cathedral, which adds considerably to the appearance of this neat little village. A sheriff's court for small debts is held in the months of January, May, and September, in which claims are adjudicated to the amount of £8 6s. 8d. Verging upon the extremity of the Frith stands the ruins of the priory, founded in the early part of the thirteenth century, and peopled by monks from France, who gave to the place its present name; the venerable remains form an object of curiosity and interest to the tourist, but the falls of Kilmorack are pre-eminent in attraction, and present a scene of great natural beauty. The banks of the river are bold and rocky, and in the course of its windings it divides in such a way as to form the fascinating island of Aigas. There is excellent salmon fishing in the Beaulay, and at the falls many are occasionally caught by their leaping on the dry banks in their effort to surmount the cataract. It was formerly recorded that the late Lord Lovat, noticing the frequency of this mistake of that fish, once performed a curious experiment here; he made a fire on the brink of the river, and placed on it a large pot filled with water; speedily a salmon, making a leap in the wrong direction, tumbled into the pot, where it was soon boiled and eaten by his lordship and his attendants; this was done that he might boast in the south of the wonders that existed in the highlands (which were then but little known), and to say that in his country provisions were so abundant that if a fire were made on a pot set on it to boil on the banks of a river, the salmon would of themselves leap into the pot to be boiled. Two miles further to the westward of the falls may be contemplated the splendid scenery of the valley of the Dirrum, allowed to surpass any other view in Scotland. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they generally occur on the second or third Wednesday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts. In 1871 the entire parish of Kilmorack contained a population of 2,728, of this number the village of Beaulay had 855.

KILTARLITY is a parish three miles s.w. of Beaulay. In it are Established and Free churches and four public schools. Beaufort Castle, in this parish, is the seat of Lord Lovat. Population in 1871, 2,537.

KIRKHILL is a parish 6 miles w. from Inverness. In it also are Established and Free churches and public schools. Population in 1871, 1,582.

POST OFFICE, BEAULY, Daniel McGrath, Post Master.—Letters arrive from London and the South at ten in the morning and half-past two afternoon; from Dingwall and the North at ten morning and forty minutes past six evening, and are despatched to London and the South at nine morning and twenty minutes past six evening, and to Dingwall and the North at fifteen minutes past nine morning and twenty-six minutes past six evening.

BOLESKINE WITH ABERTARFF,

AND THE VILLAGES OF FORT AUGUSTUS, URQUHART AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BOLESKINE with ABERTARFF is an united parish lying on the south side of the Loch Ness, twenty-four miles in length, and from ten to twelve miles in breadth. FORT AUGUSTUS, in this parish, stands on the western extremity of Loch Ness, and on the south bank of the Caledonian Canal, thirty miles north-east of Fort William and thirty-five from Inverness. This fort, with Fort George on the Moray Firth, and Fort William, are within the county of Inverness, the three forming a line of fortresses which were erected to overawe the Highlanders. In the village of Fort Augustus are places of worship for members of the Established and Free churches, together with a Roman Catholic monastery, erected on the site of the old barracks at Fort Augustus. There are also Established churches at BOLESKINE, GLEN URQUHART, and INVERMORISTON. In this parish are situated the famed Falls of Foyers, with the Pass of Inverlarigaig, both within one mile of the pier at Foyers, on Loch Ness. The parish in 1871 had a population of 1,578.

CAMPBELTOWN,

ARDERSIER, FORT GEORGE, PETTY, AND CROY.

CAMPBELTOWN is a village in the parish of Ardersier, 31 miles w. from Elgin, 19 w. from Forres, 10 s. from Inverness, 9½ w. from Nairn, and about a mile from Fort George; situated on the coast of a picturesque bay, and at the foot of an eminence called Cromwell's mount, on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification, and behind the view is very extensive, embracing parts of eight or nine counties. This place, which originated only from the residences of those connected with the garrison, is now a village of some pretensions, possesses many facilities for improvement, and has a strong chalybeate spring, which is much frequented by invalids. Some inns are in the village, and several schools. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August. The parish of Ardersier encloses an area of 3,824 acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 1,284; of this number the village of Campbeltown had 845.

Fort George, about a mile and a half from Campbeltown, was erected immediately after the year 1746 at an expense of £160,000 in order to keep the Highlands in check. It covers fifteen acres of a level point, projecting into the Moray Frith, the ramparts on three sides, rising almost out of the sea; it is said to be one of the most regular fortifications in Britain. It was mounted by eighty cannon, on four bastions, and completely commands the entrance into the harbour of Inverness. A small pier projects from the fort into the sea, for the use of the ferry boats, which here communicate with the opposite coast of Ross-shire.

Croy is a parish partly in the county of Inverness and partly in that of Nairn, lying betwixt the river Nairn and the upper arm of the Moray Frith, having Ardersier on the north. There is an Established and a Free church, and a public school in the parish, the population of which in 1871 was 1,811. Petty is a parish, containing a population of 1,543 persons.

FORT WILLIAM.

BALLACHULISH NORTH AND SOUTH, CORRAN-FERRY, CORPACH, KILMONIVAIG, AND LAGGAN.

FORT WILLIAM (formerly called Maryburgh and also Gordonburgh), is a town and seaport, in the parish of KILMALIE; 133 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 106 N.W. from Glasgow, 65 S.W. from Inverness, and 40 N.E. from Oban; situated on the eastern shore and near the head of Loch Linnhe. The chief branches of business are agriculture and fishing, and it is a place of considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A communication is maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan Canals daily during summer, and twice a week during winter. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834 by the Society for Promoting the British Fisheries, and by subscriptions, at an expense of about £1,500. A very handsome suspension bridge of 250 feet span was erected over the river Lochy, by Donald Cameron, Esq., of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000. The town consists of one tolerably regular street, which contains some good buildings, and the branches of the British Linen Co.'s Bank, the Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland, Limited; these establishments affording facilities for monetary and commercial transactions in this remote part of the kingdom. Fort William is governed by police commissioners under the Lindsay Act; and by the Reform Act it is appointed one of the stations for taking the votes of the county electors. The sheriff substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session. The fort, from which the town derives its modern name, "Fort William," is a little distance north of the town, and was first founded in 1655 during the protectorate of Cromwell by the advice and under the direction of General Monk. No part of what was then built is now standing, and the old barrack erected in 1693, from its ruinous state has been condemned for some time. The fort was attacked by the Highland clans under Prince Charles, in 1746, and made a successful defence. In the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, is a long established and sometimes very productive salmon fishery. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Invernoch Castle, said to have been founded anterior to the Christian era. Tradition may err in this particular, but it was certainly rebuilt, on its present extensive site, by an order from the Scottish Government, in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Canyn family; the western tower being still called Cumyn tower. It consists of four large round towers, thirty feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, twenty feet high and ten feet thick, forming a quadrangle of large dimensions; the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed; and in 1835, the then proprietor, the Marquis of Abercorn, with injudicious taste, enclosed the whole structure at a considerable expense. In 1847 was erected at Fort William a handsome obelisk of granite, thirty feet high, by Sir Duncan Cameron, Bart. In 1852 a handsome monument was erected in High street, to the late William Kennedy, Esq., M.D. in commemoration of his professional skill and unwearied benevolence. Half a mile from the town is situated the distillery of Mr. Donald P. McDonald, noted for its manufacture of the famous "Long John" whiskey. The most sublime object in this district, and one which attracts a crowd of visitors here in the summer, is the majestic Ben Nevis. The ascent to the summit is difficult, but should the intrepid adventurer be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region on a fine cloudless day, the contemplation of the almost boundless expanse of prospect spread out far beneath his aerial position will amply compensate him for his toil and perseverance. The Scottish Meteorological Society have erected on Ben Nevis a temporary observatory, to be succeeded by a permanent one, subscriptions for which are being collected, the above society subscribing £100 annually towards its maintenance. Mr. Clement L. Wragge, F.R.G.S., F.M.S. is the observer. The whole country, indeed, between Fort William and Glasgow is perhaps unequalled in Europe for variety of scenery. First class accommodation is supplied to tourists and commercial gentlemen and families at the Imperial, Alexandra, and West End hotels. Fairs are held on the second Wednesdays in June, July, and November. In 1871 Fort William had a population of 1,212.

LAGGAN is a parish in Badenoch district, measuring from north-east to south-west upwards of 20 miles, and from north to south a little over that number. It contains Loch Laggan, a large sheet of water eight miles in length and one in width. The village is situated on the great north road, by Dalwhinnie and Garvamore, about half way between both. Population of the parish in 1871, 950.

KILMONIVAIG is a very large parish, nine miles N.E. of Fort William. The places of worship are an Established and a Free church. In 1871 this parish had a population of 1,967.

BALLACHULISH NORTH is situated on the north shore of Loch Leven, about twelve miles S. from Fort William. This place has a small neat church of the Establishment, and also a Free church school. In BALLACHULISH SOUTH is a productive slate quarry. Not far from the quarry is found valuable limestone, its product possessing superior adhesive qualities. Ballachulish North is united with Corrann-ferry North (in Argyleshire), on the opposite side of Loch Linnhe, in one ecclesiastical parish; the latter is about three miles west from the former, and nine south from Fort William. About a mile west, not far from the border of Loch Linnhe, is Ardour House, the respectable mansion and family residence of Alexander T. Maclean, Esq., surrounded with fine plantations, at the foot of the Ardgowan hills.

CORPACH is a widely-spread, but not very populous, village on the north shore of Loch Eil (in the county of Argyle, but in the same parish as Fort William), three miles north from the Fort; though this village is in Argyleshire the principal part of the parish of Kilmalie, in which it is situate, is in the county of Inverness, and is surrounded by that county and Loch Eil. Corpach is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of that great national undertaking, the Caledonian Canal, which here enters Loch Eil by four locks; a little above are eight others, called "Neptune's Staircase;" they are capable of admitting vessels of three hundred tons (not drawing above twelve feet of water), and each lock rises eight feet. Kilmalie parish church is situate about half a mile from the end of the canal, at Corpach; it was erected in 1784. Near the church stands a pyramidal obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, with an inscription composed by Sir Walter Scott, raised to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, who was slain at the battle of Waterloo, in 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about thirty-five miles distant, and Moidart and Loch Shiel. At Burradale, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745. He sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August; the following day he landed and entered Glenfinnan, where he was met by Cameron of Lochiel, and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen; commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenalladale has erected a monument.

INVERNESS,

DAVIOT, DORES AND MOY.

INVERNESS, the capital of the highlands, and of the large county of its name, is situated on the banks of the Ness, near to its confluence with the Beaulie Firth, and commands the eastern approach to the Great Glen of Scotland (Glean mor na Albain). The distance by rail from Edinburgh is 195 miles, via Fife, and 213, via Stirling; 108½ from Aberdeen; 203 from Glasgow; 199¼ from Dundee; 168 from Thurso; 144 from Perth; and 25 from Inverness. We learn from Richards' "Itinerary" (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170) that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the Jus Latinitalis; only two others in Scotland are mentioned—Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Boethius assigns as the scene of Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect. Shakespeare's play of "Macbeth" has served to make the place historically famous, though the actual murder may well have occurred in any other of Macbeth's castles. This castle, says the great poet—

"—bath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentler senses."

It is supposed to have stood a short distance east of the town, upon an eminence called the "Crown." After the fall of Macbeth, Malcolm Canmore destroyed it, and erected a new castle, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up, during the rebellion. The handsome County Buildings now stand upon its site (which will be hereafter mentioned).

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, even amid the dry technical details of its great charter; "its good and pleasant situation" is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh. Inverness is a royal burgh of great antiquity, having, it is said, received a charter in 1067 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. The great charter of the town, however, was conferred by James VI., in 1591. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one; considerable charitable funds are under their management. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Nairn, Forres, and Fortrose, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail, with magnificence as a whole—"uniting," says a tourist, "two opposite qualities, and each in the greatest perfection—the characters of a rich, open, lowland country, with those of the wildest Alpine scenery; both being also close at hand, and in many places intermixed; while to all this is added a series of maritime views not often excelled." The walks near the town are deserving of a stranger's perambulation; whether along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, or along the sea shore, or by the margin of the canal; or to the singularly-shaped hill of Tomnahaurich, or "hill of the fairies" (which, with singular appropriateness, has been converted into a cemetery, and now forms one of the finest and most picturesque spots for the purpose in Britain); or to the summit of Craig Phadrig (the veneration of which affords matter of speculation to the antiquarian); to the druidical circles in the "Leys;" to Clava, a literal "City of Tombs" or to Drumossie Moor, where the last of the Stuarts, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," sustained his final defeat, and "the Clans of Culloden were scattered in flight"; in each and all of these directions there is much to please and interest the man of taste or science. The eminent lexicographer, Dr. Johnson, in speaking of Inverness, adds—"The language of this town has long been considered as peculiarly elegant;" a fact which he ascribes to the intermixture of Cromwell's soldiers with the inhabitants. This is a fanciful hypothesis in many ways, and at once appears hardly reconcilable with the fact that the Gaelic continues to be the prevailing language still spoken by the common people; the soldiers must have learnt the one when they taught the other. A more feasible theory, and one more in accordance with the facts, is that Inverness has always been a centre of education for the north, and has many pretensions to elegance and refinement such as are not found in any other town north of Edinburgh. A large part of its population consists of retired gentlemen, and the aristocracy of the neighbourhood is both numerous and influential. This has had its effect on the inhabitants, who are influenced by the prevailing tone of refinement, unconsciously appear to reflect in their manner of speech. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern part of the Ness—a broad, clear, and equably flowing stream—which is here crossed by a new and handsome suspension bridge erected at the expense of the Government, and maintained by an annual assessment levied over the northern counties; this structure takes the place of the old one, and cost £26,000. The old bridge, consisting of seven arches, erected in 1683, was, on the 25th of January, 1849, carried away by the overflowing of the river; and that portion of the town lying on the north side of it was completely inundated, and the inhabitants compelled to make use of boats to pass through the street. There are in addition two elegant suspension bridges for foot passengers, the lower of which was opened on the 2nd of May, 1832, by Sir Alexander Matheson Bart., of Lochalsh, M.P., and a stout wooden traffic bridge at the lower part of the town. The principal streets are Union street, immediately opposite the railway station, which, though not of great length, is very much admired for its uniformity and handsome appearance; High street, Church street, Academy street, Castle street, and Bridge street, which contain many handsome public buildings and important places of business. Amongst the public buildings we must first mention the Castle of Inverness, being pre-eminent as much for its architectural beauty as for its commanding position. This modern edifice was built in 1836 upon the site of the old castle erected by Malcolm Canmore, as before mentioned, at a cost of £10,000, for the accommodation of the courts of justice in the northern circuit, and for the preservation of the records and transactions of the judicial business of the country; it is built from the design of Mr. Burn, architect, Edinburgh, after the old English castellated style, and harmonises well, from its varied projecting and retreating masses, its square and round towers, with the waning outline of the surrounding scenery; it contains a courtroom, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business and the convenience of the different functionaries connected therewith. The court house is adorned with a splendid painting, by Raeburn, of the late Charles Grant, of Glenelg, long M.P. for the county; and in a niche of the staircase is a beautiful bust, by the late Patrick Park, R.S.A., of the late Wm. Fraser-Tytler, many years sheriff and convener of the county. Being the seat of the sheriff of the county, the courts of that functionary are held here. The sheriff's small debt court is held every Friday during session time for the recovery of sums not exceeding £12; and a justice of peace court is held monthly for adjudicating claims not exceeding 45 in amount. Another important building, to be completed during the present (1883) year, is the extensive range of military barracks erected by Government on the Hut of Health. The barracks were built in consequence of the new arrangement of the country into regimental districts, by which Inverness became the head-quarters of its territorial regiment, and will cost about £50,000. The other public buildings, &c. (exclusive of edifices for Divine worship) are the Working Men's Club, situated in Bridge street, a handsome and commodious new building which owes its origin and present position to the great liberality and untiring exertions of the late Donald McDougall, Esq. of Dunolly Cottage. It possesses an extensive library of 7,000 volumes, and a contribution of books received from Her Majesty the Queen; it also contains a reading room and a lecture hall, with rooms for amusement, and is held in trust by the Town Council for the behoof of the community.

To the late Mr. Grant, of Bught, the community are mainly indebted for the handsome New Town Hall, which occupies the site of the old structure facing the Exchange. In 1873, Mr. Grant bequeathed £5,000, for the purpose of aiding in its erection, and the foundation stone was accordingly laid in 1878, by Mr. Alexander Simpson, then Provost of the Burgh. The style of architecture is early decorated Gothic, with details of a French character. The building occupies an area of about 700 square yards, with a frontage of 73 feet to High street. It is mainly two stories in height, the different floors being well marked by base and string courses, and the wall head finished at a height of 47 feet by an ornamental parapet. The centre portion has a richly ornamented gable flanked by round towers, and an oak spirelet surmounts the whole. The town's arms occupy the middle of the portion over the centre window. The Castle elevation has a shop in the ground floor and four trefoil headed windows similar to those in the front elevation, above which are three large double light windows, with arched tops and carved capitals. In front is the main staircase, lighted by three windows, the rear filled with stained glass containing the town's arms, the royal arms and the Scottish arms respectively, and on either side of the staircase on the ground floor are the offices of the town clerk and town chamberlain. The Town Hall is 65 feet long, 35 feet broad and 33 feet high, the ceiling is of pitch pine panelled and richly decorated with heraldic emblems. Above the centre of the three doorways is the orchestral gallery with musicians' room behind. The hall is lighted by fourteen windows filled with stained glass, bearing the arms of the Highland clans. The central stained glass window is the gift of Mrs. Warrand, of Bught. The end windows shew subjects representing Art, Science, Law, Agriculture, Education, Literature, Arms of the Corporate Trades of the Burgh, and the Royal and Scottish Arms. It contains portraits of the late Prince Consort, Duncan Forbes of Culloden, and James Robertson of Aultnashkinch, former Provosts; a copy of Ramsay's original portrait of Flora MacDonald, President Forbes, Hector Munro of Fowls, some time M.P. for the burgh, and also a bust of the late Dr. Carruthers by Alexander Munro. The work in the various windows was executed by Messrs. Adam and Small, of Glasgow, and the vestibule, paving, &c., by Messrs. W. Hawley & Co., of Edinburgh. A residence for the janitor occupies the top of the building, the council chamber the west end of the Castle wynd elevation, and the provost's room the east end or Castle street elevation. The furniture was specially designed for it by the architects, the provost's chair being made of oak richly carved. The hall, of which Messrs. Lawrie and Matthews, of London, were the architects, was formally opened by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, on the 19th January, 1882, and cost about £15,000. A handsome fountain, the gift of Dr. George Forbes, occupies the front of the Exchange. Underneath the fountain rises the time-honoured palladium of the burgh, Clachnacuddin. Sir Walter Scott calls this stone the Charter Stone of the Burgh, and in "Anderson's Guide" it is said that "natives of Inverness in all parts of the world turn with fond affection to friends round the Clachnacuddin." The word is Celtic and means the "stone of the tubs," for it was here the young women used to rest their tubs when coming from the Ness, and around it the old burghers gathered for their social talk.

The Highland Club House, in High street, a fine piece of masonry, and originally an hotel, greatly adds to the appearance of the street. The Young Men's Christian Association building, at the corner of High street and Castle street, is a fine ornamental structure, costing about £3,500, and consists of library, hall, and class rooms. The Free Library, Museum, and School of Science and Art, situated in Castle wynd, was completed at a cost of £3,900, and was opened on the 14th October, 1881, by Joseph Mitchell, Esq., of Viewhill. It consists of library, museum, class rooms, and curator's house. The library contains 5,000 volumes, and, as its name signifies, is free, being supported by a small rate levied on the owners and occupiers of property in the town. The museum, when completed, will illustrate the botany, geology, natural history, antiquities, &c., of the district. It has been largely provided for by the labours of a number of gentlemen who, some years ago, formed themselves into a Field Club, and conducted scientific excursions in the vicinity. At the head of Bridge street a handsome spire attracts attention; this was the site of the former gaol, which was surmounted by this spire, rising to a height of 130 feet, and erected in 1791. This town is the appointed seat of the Inverness-shire Farming Society, and also of the Northern Meeting, composed of noblemen and gentlemen in the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. They have large and elegant rooms in Church street set apart for that purpose, and a pavilion and park. It is also the head quarters of two battalions of infantry (militia and volunteers), and a brigade of volunteer artillery. The militia are mostly raised among the sturdy fishermen on the west coast, but the town alone contributes 800 volunteers between artillery and infantry, a very respectable number in proportion to the number of inhabitants.

The Northern Infirmary, erected in 1803, and situated in Ness walk, is a large and well-constructed building, with an imposing exterior. The Inverness Dispensary for the sick poor, in Huntly street, is also a good building, supported by voluntary contributions. The Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, situated on Hill terrace, is an old school building, which was purchased from the School Board on the erection of a handsome new school in the same quarter, and converted into a commodious home for blind persons in the northern counties. It contains dining hall, class rooms, workshop, dormitories, and matron's and servants' rooms, and was opened in March, 1881. The cost of the building and reconstruction would be about £2,000, and it has accommodation for 18 blind persons. In it the blind are taught to read and write, and do various descriptions of fancy and other work. Three educational institutions must be noticed as highly efficient in the benefits they respectively confer. The Royal Academy, a liberally endowed institution, in Academy street, was established in 1792 for the purpose of supplying the higher education to the inhabitants of Inverness and surrounding country, and has recently been much extended and improved. In 1865 important changes were effected in the organisation of the school, in order to do away with the conflicting interests of several independent masters, and to enable the directors to offer to the pupils the advantages of a systematic course of instruction. At the same time the former building, which is now used by the boys alone, underwent extensive repairs and alterations, by which its comfort and convenience have been much increased. The present arrangements were completed in 1865, by the erection of a new building for the accommodation of the girls. The Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's School, was established in 1842 by bequest of the late Dr. Bell, LL.D. of Madras, for the advantage of the middle and lumber class of children, who are instructed in all the useful branches of an English education; their number is generally about five hundred. The premises form an elegant building, in an open and airy situation on the east side of the town. The front is embellished by a beautiful row of fluted columns. The High Public School, situated on Kingsmills road, and erected at a cost of about £3,000, is managed by the local School Board.

The religious edifices comprise the High Established Church, Church street, an ancient structure, with tower and spire; West Established, Huntly street; Free High Church, Bank street, a handsome modern erection, with an imposing spire; North Free Church, North Church place; East Free Church, Academy street; West Free, Upper Kessock street; United Presbyterian Church, Union street; Independent Chapel, Fraser street; Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Inglis street; Roman Catholic Chapel, Huntly street; Episcopal Chapel (St. John's), Church street; and St. Andrew's Episcopal Cathedral, Ardross street, a very imposing structure; the foundation stone was laid October 17th, 1866, by the late Dr. Longley, Archbishop of Canterbury, and it was opened for divine service in September, 1869. The building is in the decorated Gothic style, and has, with all its furniture and fittings throughout, been executed from the designs of Alexander Ross, Esq. Inverness. The following are the principal dimensions:—Length of nave, 90 feet; choir and chancel, 60 feet; width of nave, 69 feet; 30 feet between the columns and 15 feet in each of the aisles. External dimensions:—163 feet long by 72 feet across west front; height of towers, 100 feet; spire, 109 feet; total, 200 feet. Height to ridge of roof, 88 feet. The contractors for building, carving, and every other particular were almost exclusively tradesmen of Inverness. The transepts are arranged after the old Scotch model, to project slightly beyond the aisles. Externally, the building exhibits a nave, with aisles, transepts, and apsidal chancel of equal height. At the west end are situated two towers, each for the present without spires, but carried up to the spring of spires, a height of 100 feet; the ultimate height being nearly 200 feet. The north tower contains a fine peal of bells, the cost of which was defrayed by public subscription and private donations—a testimony to the esteem in which the worthy bishop of the diocese, Dr. Eden, is held by all classes of the community. At the north-east angle is the octagonal chapter house. The cathedral is built of a pink freestone, from Conon quarry, near Dingwall, the dressings being of a warm cream tint, from Coveon, near Elgin. The north tower forms a side entrance through a porch in its base, and in the south tower is the baptistry; the main entrance being situated in the west front between the towers. This entrance opens into a cloister, formed into a handsome stone screen, extending across the end of the nave from tower to tower, thus forming a vista through the north porch, cloister, and baptistry, the breadth of the building. The screen is fitted with clear plate glass, adding much to the general interior effect, and admitting of a full view of the cathedral, without actually entering within the part set aside for divine worship. The cost of this beautiful building was over £20,000. A list of the officiating ministers for the whole will be found under the head of "Public Buildings" in the Directory.

COMMERCE, TRADE, &c.—At the quays, and also at the Caledonian Canal wharfs, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. Inverness possesses an extensive trade carried on in very fine coasting and steam vessels. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, wool, timber, salmon, &c. The imports comprise timber, Archangel tar, guano, and wheat. There are ship and boat building yards, a manufactory for woollen cloths, a tobacco manufactory, two breweries, an aerated water manufactory, three iron foundries, a large new distillery, of which Mr. George Rose is the proprietor, and other trades of a local nature. There are no fewer than six banking companies established in Inverness, and a National Security Savings Bank—these are noticed under their proper head in the Directory of the town. The premises of the Caledonian Bank, erected in 1849 form a very handsome building on the north side of High street; it is of freestone, having a row of elegant Corinthian columns in front, and is highly ornamental to the locality in which it stands. The shops in Inverness are well supplied with goods of every description, and are resorted to not only by the inhabitants of the vicinity, but also by those of the remoter valleys of the shire, and by many from the contiguous counties. The press of Inverness publishes three newspapers—the Advertiser, published on Tuesday and Friday, with a weekly edition on Saturday; the Courier on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday and the Chronicle on Wednesday. The Celtic Magazine is also published on the first of each month. During the summer months large numbers of visitors come to the town, the accommodation for whom can easily be found in the large and handsome hotels which Inverness is noted to contain. Principal among these are the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station, the Royal, opposite the railway station, the Caledonian, in Church street, the Waverley Temperance Hotel, in Union street, and the large new Temperance Hotel on Ness walk. Inverness being the centre to which the principal lines of road in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian Canal on the one hand, and the Moray Frith on the other—maintains a rapid, frequent, and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom; being also the head quarters of the Highland Railway, whose large works afford employment to about a thousand artisans, besides numerous officials. It is in regular communication by rail with Wick and Thurso in the north; with Strome Ferry, the terminus of the Dingwall and Skye railway on the west coast (from which the company's steamers sail to Portree in Skye, and MacBrayne's steamers to Stornoway, Glasgow, &c.), and with Aberdeen, Perth, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and all the rest of the kingdom.

MARKETS AND FAIRS.—The Beauly, or Muir of Ord, are the most important cattle fairs, and are held on the Muir of Ord, on the third Thursday of January; on the third Thursday of February; on the third Wednesday and Thursday of March; on the third Wednesday and Thursday of April; on the second Wednesday and Thursday of May; on the third Wednesday and Thursday of June; on the second Thursday of July, for half-bred sheep; and on the third Wednesday and Thursday, for sheep and cattle; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk, in August; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk, in September; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk, in October; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Edinburgh Hallow Fair, in November; on the Thursday after the third Wednesday in December. At all the markets, Wednesday is the principal day for the sale of sheep and lambs, and is held exclusively for that purpose; Thursday for the sale of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, &c. The Inverness markets are held on the Friday subsequent to Muir of Ord market.

According to the census returns for 1871, Inverness contained a population of 14,610; and by those for 1881, 17,366. We have extracted, with a few alterations, from "Anderson's Guide to the Highlands" (an able, scientific, and well got up work), the following list of objects, in and about Inverness, worthy of being visited by strangers:—

 The Steamers of David MacBrayne (Glasgow) ply regularly during the year between Inverness and Glasgow, via Caledonian and Crinan Canals. A steamer leaves Inverness daily (Sunday excepted), carrying H.M. mails to Lochness and Fort Augustus, at 3.30 p.m., and leaves Fort Augustus every morning (Sunday excepted) at six.
 This service is in connection with the limited mail trains to and from the South.
 In the summer months there is additional communication each way by swift steamers, viz. during May and June, from Inverness and Glasgow, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 7 a.m., and daily during July, August, and September. In connection with these, from Oban, the company's steamers ply to Staffa and Iona, Glencoe, Skye and Gareloch, Stornoway, &c.
 Steamers carrying goods as well as passengers leave Inverness and Glasgow twice a week (Monday and Thursday) during the

KINGUSSIE,

ALVIE, LAGGAN, DALWHINNIE, NEWTONMORE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINGUSSIE, the Gaelic name of which is the termination of the "Pine Forest," is the name of a parish and beautiful village, 44 miles s. from Inverness, and 73 n. from Perth, on the great road between the two towns, and 50 miles n.e. from Fort William. It is the capital of the once renowned lordship of Badenoch, and previous to the year 1861 was all but inaccessible to the general public. By the opening of the Inverness and Perth Junction, now designated the Highland Railway, the beautiful and mountainous scenery of the district is now within easy reach of the tourist, and from the number who have already visited it it promises to become a favourite resort. The district in which the village is situated is nearly in the centre of the Highlands of Scotland, where the genuine race of the Gael and their original language existed at one time in its purity. The inhabitants in the time of war, are fond of military life, and the 42nd and 92nd Highland regiments included men from this quarter; the late Duke of Gordon being the popular colonel of these corps for many years. The commissioners of roads and bridges, in prosecution of their liberality towards the Highlands of Scotland, opened a beautiful new line of road from Kingussie to Fort William, by Loch Laggan, through part of the remains of the ancient Caledonian forest, and in sight of the famed parallel roads in Glenroy. A more romantic route for the traveller than this by Loch Laggan is rarely to be seen. The Duke of Abercorn erected a costly and beautiful shooting establishment (Ardverikie Lodge) on the banks of the lake, in which Her Majesty resided for about six weeks in the year 1846; it is now occupied by Sir John Ramsden, M.P., the proprietor. Another improvement in this district was effected by the erection of a substantial wooden bridge over the Spey, which previously was only crossed by a ferry. The village stands on the north bank of the river, not far from the north base of the Grampian Hills, in sight of Cairn Gorm, famous for its transparent stones, and Ben Macdui, one of the loftiest mountains in Britain. The village contains a very handsome county building, in which the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch are held, and a sheriff's small debt court is held in January, May and September.

The church, which is of modern erection, commodious and handsome, is on a hill at the east end of the village, in a situation which is not surpassed for beauty. In 1877 a handsome Free church was erected, capable of accommodating a large congregation. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the places of worship being still visible. One of the cemeteries is named after St. Columbus, and is said to have been originally dedicated to that holy personage. On the south bank of the river opposite the village stand the ruins of Ruthven Castle, which was a barrack in the reign of George II., and burnt down in 1745. It was a place of great antiquity and note, having been the residence and castle of Walter Cumming, Lord of Badenoch and his ancestors, who at one period lorded over almost all the Highlands of Scotland. Walter Cumming's oppression and tyranny became so intolerable to all within his power, which was very extended, that the Clan Chattan (M'Pherson), threw off the yoke, and expelled the tyrant from the country; for which deed of valour they acquired the red hand and dagger, in addition to their coat of arms. Ruthven Castle was the rallying point of those brave but deluded heroes of 1745-6 where they assembled after the battle of Culloden, in considerable strength and high spirits, eager and anxious to be again led against the Duke of Cumberland. Balls and merriment were kept up by the officers and men for several nights, while expresses were despatched in quest of the Prince, who was found wandering in the mountains and making for the Hebrides, sunk in spirits and in deep despair, returning the answer to his faithful adherents "that all was over with him." Their loss at Culloden was nothing compared to the depression this caused to their spirits by disappointment. From that moment they dis-

PORTREE,

EIGG, RAASAY, RONA, BARRA, BRACADALE, DURINISH, HARRIS, GLENELG, KILMUIR, LOCHMADDY, NORTH AND SOUTH UIST, SLEAT, SNIZORT, STRATH, AND NUMEROUS SMALL ISLES.

PORTREE is a parish in the Isle of Skye. The village of Portree is the principal one in the parish of the adjacent isles, and is a flourishing little seaport; about 210 miles from Inverness by Oban, 181 by Beaul, Dingwall, and Strone Ferry, and 109 by Invermoriston and Shiel House, 74 n. from Tobermory, 21 e. from Dunvegan, and 24 n.w. from Broadford. It is reached by steamer from Oban, or by rail by Dingwall, Garve, Auchinault, Achnasheen and Jeantown to Strone Ferry, and thence by railway steamer. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with thriving trees. It is of some business, has three banking establishments, a woollen manufactory in the vicinity, and three good hotels and posting houses. In the mill, which was erected in 1850, are manufactured tweeds, plaids, yarns, and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has not much depth at low water, but the tide rises from twelve to sixteen feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth from five to twelve fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, at whose base the quay is erected, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, from which there is a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. On the west of the village, amidst some thriving plantations, stands Portree House, belonging to Lord Macdonald. A sheriff court is held every Thursday during session. The votes of the county electors in Skye, for a member of Parliament for Inverness-shire, are taken at Portree and Broadford. The chief exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt herrings, salmon (pickled chiefly for London), and cod and ling both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool. The entire parish of Portree contained a population in 1871 of 2,923, and in 1881, 3,190.

Skye is an extensive island on the western coast of Scotland, forming no inconsiderable portion of the county of Inverness, being the largest of the Western isles, with the exception of Lewis. It is forty-six miles from north to south, and twenty-seven from east to west in a direct line; but the parliamentary road, commencing at Arnadale in the south, and running chiefly on the eastern coast to Uig, in the north, is seventy-two miles long; and there is a cross road extending nine miles still further in the latter direction. The general face of the country is mountainous, which, although it may be inviting to the tourist from the sublime scenery it presents, is a great barrier to the successful operations of the husbandman; and the island cannot be called fertile if we except the narrow strips of land in the valleys, and some parts near the coast. The eastern part of the island is separated from Glenelg, on the main land, by a narrow sound, called the Kyles of Skye. The island belongs to a number of proprietors, and is principally occupied in large grazing farms of six or seven miles in extent, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle, and some small horses. Formerly great quantities of kelp were made here. Eight miles south of Portree, in the district known as "Macleod's country," may be contemplated some of the finest and beautifully-varied mountain scenery in the Highlands. This part also abounds with game; and lake and river angling may here be successfully pursued by the tourist, and refreshment and accommodation obtained at the Slighchan Inn, situated at the base of the celebrated Cuchullin hills (pronounced Coolin). Dunvegan Castle, once the princely residence of the chief of the Macleods, is distant twenty-one miles from Portree, but its here noticed as one of the most ancient structures of the Highlands; it has been lately repaired and fitted up at a great expense. Not far from the castle is a convenient inn. In proceeding to Portree, from the south, is seen from the deck of the steamer Arnadale Castle the seat of Lord Macdonald, agreeably situated near the shore, at the south-east corner of the island, amidst thriving plantations and sheltering woods. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the main land, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north. The parish of Portree also comprises the isles of PLADDA, RAASAY, and RONA.

The peculiar features of Skye are its romantic views, its mountain and water scenery, the charming seats with which the country is studded, as seen from different points, and some natural curiosities in certain localities. A particular notice of all the places worthy of a stranger's visit would occupy more space than we could devote to the subject; we cannot, however omit noticing the small lake of Coruisk, about ten miles south-west from Broadford, whose sides rise almost perpendicularly from its deep black waters to a great height; also a spar cave on the coast of Strathard, and about seven miles north of Broadford and Stor Rock is exhibited one of the most grand and imposing scenes in Scotland. This is a mountain seven miles north of Portree, whose summit is full two thousand feet above the level of the sea, the eastern side being a grand precipice of bare rugged rock, often rising perpendicularly five hundred feet; but the most remarkable feature about it, and which renders it dissimilar to any other mountain, are several detached pyramids, or almost perpendicular columns of rock, varying from three hundred to near five hundred feet in height; some standing at a considerable distance from the mountain, and appearing as though the intermediate parts, being too soft to resist the influence that acted upon them had crumbled away, leaving the harder materials as a monument of their ability to resist the ravages of time and raging of the tempest. One of these isolated spiral masses of rock rises one hundred and sixty-five feet from the base, and is two hundred and forty feet in circumference; it seems at a distance to stand on an apex, from which one might imagine it would be easy to remove it; indeed, the spectator cannot divest himself of the apprehension that it would fall upon him should he approach too near. The scene is altogether grand and imposing, and must be visited to be appreciated. The fairs in Skye are held as follows: Skye—May: Broadford cattle, Thursday after last Tuesday; Portree cattle, last Tuesday. August—Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday; Sligichan, Monday before Portree. September—Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Sligichan cattle, third Tuesday. North and South Uist—May: South Uist, Wednesday before Portree. North Uist, Friday before Portree. July—South Uist, Friday after Inverness sheep and wool market; North Uist, same day. September—South Uist, Wednesday week before Sligichan; North Uist, Friday week before Sligichan. By the census returns for 1881, the island of Skye contained a population of 17,789, a decrease of 362 since 1871.

Eigg, or Ego, is a small island in the Hebrides, belonging to Inverness-shire, about twelve miles s.w. of the promontory of Slent, the most southern point of Skye. It is about three miles long from north to south, surmounted on the southern extremity by a perpendicular wall or rampart called the Scur of Eigg, composed of pitchstone porphyry columns, running about a mile in length nearly east and west, from 800 to 400 feet broad, and from 350 to 400 feet high, the summit being about 1340 feet above the level of the sea. The Scur is distinctly columnar, the pillars generally being about a foot in diameter, though there is a stratum of columns at the east end, inclining towards the horizon, whose diameters are from two and a half to three feet. The appearance of this singularly grand production of nature from every point is indescribably magnificent, and when viewed from the east end assumes the form of a stupendous ruined tower. At the base of the rocks on the north and south sides, several large caves have been formed by the softer parts of the rocks crumbling away; the bases of the columns above form the ceiling of these caves, and as in Staffa, presents a resemblance to the surface of honeycombs. Two steamboats pass here on their way to Portree, and return every week in summer. Population in 1871, 282.

RAASAY, or Razay, is an island of the Hebrides, belonging to the parish of Portree, about thirteen miles long and two broad, lying to the east of Skye, opposite Portree, separated from it by the sound of Raasay, about four miles wide. It is the property of Edward Herbert Wood, Esq., of Raasay, who has a fine mansion in a bay near the south-western extremity of the island. There are other islands in the neighbourhood of Skye, as SCALPA to the east, RUM and CANNA to the south-west, &c. Population in 1871, 210.

RONA, or Ronay, is an island of the Hebrides, lying at the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait, just passable for vessels. It is about four miles in length by one in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona, surrounds the scattered village that lies at the bottom of the bay which contains nearly all the population of the island; there is a very fine lighthouse here.

BARRA is an island parish in the south of the Western islands and includes the isles of BARRA, BERNERAY, FLODDAY, FRIDAY, HELLISAY, MINGALAY, PABBAY, SANDERAY and WATERBAY; in length it is about six miles by a width of three miles, and contained in 1871 a population of 1,753.

BRACADALE is a parish in the isle of Skye, about seventeen miles long by a width of about five miles; it also includes the isles of HAYERSAY, ORANSAY, SOAY and VULAY. Population in 1881, 992.

DURINISH is a parish in the Isle of Skye, 17 miles long by a width of 13 miles, including in its limits the isles of WATERNISH, STEIN, and ISSAY. Population in 1881, 4,817.

HARRIS is a parish in the south end of Lewis Island, in size about 20 miles long by a width of about eight miles. It includes the isles of ANADICH, BERNERA, ESSAY, FLODDAY, KILLIGRAY, PABBAY, SCALPA, SCARP, SCOTSWAY, ST. KILDA, TARENHAY, and other small isles. Post-town, Stornoway. Population in 1871, 4,422.

KILMUIR is a parish in North Skye, 16 miles long by a width of about eight. Population, 2,681.

NORTH UIST is a parish and island situated between Harris and Benbecula, Western isles. It is about 17 miles long by a width of from 3 to 18 miles, and includes in its jurisdiction the village of LOCHMADDY, and the isles of BALESHARE, d ILLEBRAY, BOVERAY, GRIMSAY, HEISFER, KIRKIBOST, LEVERA, MROBAY, RONAY, and VALLAY. Population in 1871, 3,223.

SOUTH UIST is a parish and island seven miles south of North Uist; its length is about 21 miles by a width of about seven miles. The isles of BENBECULA, ERISKAY, PLADDA, GRIMSAY, and WIAY are in this parish. Post-town, Lochmaddy. Population, 3,669.

SLEAT is a parish on the south-east side of Skye; in size it is about 21 miles long by a width of about three. ORNSAY ISLAND is included in this parish. Population, 2,061.

SNIZORT is a parish on the north-west side of Skye; its length is about ten miles in breadth about six miles, with a very rocky coast. Population in 1881, 2,102.

STRATH, or Strathwardie, is a parish on the south-east side of Skye, with a length of 23 miles by a breadth of about seven miles. It includes PABBAY and SCALPAY islands. Population, in 1881, 2,616.

KINCARDINESHIRE,

OCCASIONALLY called the MEARNS (and improperly Mearn-shire), is a small county on the eastern coast; bounded on the north and north west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and on the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having to the sea its principal or most extensive base, and which reaches along the coast from the bay of Aberdeen to the mouth of the North Esk river, about thirty miles; its greatest breadth, inland, being twenty. The contents of the area, according to Mr. Gardiner, who surveyed the county for a map, were 243,444 English acres, of which 74,849 were in actual cultivation, 27,816 improvable by tillage, 17,609 woodland, and 123,170 mountain &c. The Government returns state its area to comprise three hundred and ninety-four square miles, or 252,250 statute acres.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts, &c., until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled into a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty, called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundations of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns, before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland, from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother called Angus conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the Hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the north of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth, inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro, since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the "men of the Mearns" is a proverbial expression of old date—implying trustworthiness and integrity.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance; neither have manufactures made much progress in the district. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland; a sufficient proof of this is the fact that of all the lands in tillage nearh a seventh part is devoted to the culture of the turnip. The county is destitute of both coal and marl, and there is very little limestone—all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Firth of Forth. The limestone of the county obtained near the coast is burnt with coal, in the more inland parts with peat or wood; but, from the scarcity of fuel (no seam of coal being worked from Fife to Sunderland), there is much more lime imported into than is wrought in the shire.

In Arbuthnott parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdle Ness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from sixty to eighty feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battock, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Clairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare from 1,500 to 1,700, Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfenella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the county seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The most considerable rivers connected with this county are the Dee, the North Esk, the Cowie, the Bervie and the Carron. The Dee glides for eight or ten miles through the northern limb of the shire; the North Esk is a boundary river on the south-west for about ten miles; the Cowie has a course of ten miles through the county, previous to its falling into the sea at Stonehaven, where also the Carron empties itself; and the Bervie, after a progress of sixteen miles, discharges itself into the sea at the town to which it imparts its name. The Luther water can only be mentioned as a tributary stream to the North Esk. The Caledonian Railway with several branches pass through Kincardineshire, communicating on the north with the city of Aberdeen, and on the south with Edinburgh and various other places.

DIVISION, REPRESENTATION, &c.—Kincardineshire comprises eighteen parishes and three parts of parishes; it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie, and a burgh of barony—Stonehaven, besides many smaller towns and villages. Bervie, in connection with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin, and Forfar, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament, and the county at large another. The present member for the county is General Sir George Balfour, K.C.B. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-82, was 1,853. The Lord Lieutenant of the shire is Sir Thomas Gladstone, Bart. By the census returns for 1871 the entire county had a population of 16,784 males and 17,846 females; total, 34,630; in 1881 the numbers stood: males, 16,972, females, 17,488; total, 34,460. The number of houses inhabited at the latter date was 6,714; uninhabited, 419; building, 27.

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN.

AUCHINBLAE, the capital of the parish of Fordoun, is a thriving inland market town, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luth water, 28 miles s. by w. from Aberdeen, 16 n. from Montrose, 11 s.w. from Stonehaven, 6 from Fettercairn, 5 from Laurencekirk, and 2½ from the Fordoun station on the Caledonian Railway. The principal trade of the place is flax spinning, by power, which was established so early as 1795, being the second attempt in Scotland. The weaving of linens by the hand-loom has been entirely given up. Branches of the North of Scotland Banking Company, Limited, and the Town and County Bank, Limited, are established here. A Savings Bank was commenced in 1815; it was converted into a National Security Savings Bank in 1842; and the town was lighted by gas in 1840. A Public Hall was erected in 1870 by public subscription, at a cost of £500. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air, and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is a small assemblage of tenements, being all that remain of the former county town, Kincardine, and among these buildings, or in their vicinity, stood the court house. It ceased to be the chief town in the reign of James VI., when Stonehaven, as a more convenient situation for holding the county courts, obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle or royal palace of Kincardine. There are no records stating when this castle was built, or when it was last inhabited, but it appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III., in 994, for it was occupied by that monarch at the time of his murder by Finella. It stands on the termination of a small ridge, at an elevation of about sixty or eighty feet above the adjoining plain, and has a very commanding view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace, as Lord Hallas writes, that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296; and he quotes the record of this in Rhymer's "Fædera." As this is the last event of importance on record connected with this palace, it is not improbable that it was destroyed in the wars between the Scotch and English which followed that event. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment; and on the hill above Newlands there are the remains of a Druidical temple. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the foundations of a small friary; and near to that is a fine spring, considered to be among the most copious flowing in Scotland. The parish extends, from east to west, about ten miles, and in breadth about seven, and encloses an area of 26,880 statute acres. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil and inferior in fertility to the lower part. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and placed on a high rock in one of the most beautiful parts of the parish, is a large handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower on the west end rising to about one hundred feet in height; and in a valley between where it stands and the town of Auchinblae is situated the Free church, a neat well-finished building, but much smaller and of much humbler pretensions than its more aristocratic neighbour perched on the rock. A market for the sale of cattle and grain is held at Fordoun station on each alternate Monday, from October to the end of May; and annual fairs at Auchinblae for the sale of cattle and the hiring of agricultural labourers, on the third Thursday of April (Paschal); on Wednesday after the second Tuesday of May (old style); the 26th of May (hiring); Paddy fair (sheep) first Wednesday; cattle, first Thursday; horses, first Friday after first Tuesday (old style) in July; on the day after Kincardine O'Neil in September; and on the 22nd November (hiring). The population of the parish of Fordoun was in 1871, 2,118; of this number 496 were returned for Auchinblae.

POST OFFICE, AUCHINBLAE, James Buchan, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Fordoun) at a quarter-past seven morning and a quarter before three afternoon, and are despatched thereto at ten minutes before twelve noon and half-past seven evening.

Post Office, FORDOUN STATION, William Smith, Post Master.—Letters arrive from the South at twenty-seven minutes past two and ten minutes past ten morning, and from the North at twenty-three minutes past one and seven minutes past five afternoon, and are despatched thereto at half-past nine morning, forty minutes past five afternoon, and ten evening, and to the South at thirty minutes past one noon, half-past four afternoon, and ten evening.

BANCHORY-DAVENICK AND MARYCULTER,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF PORT-LETHEN AND HILLSIDE, CULTS, &c.

BANCHORY parish lies on both sides of the river Dee, near its confluence with the sea, and is partly in the county of Kincardine and partly in that of Aberdeen, the river Dee being here the boundary. The parish, which is for the most part rugged, heathy, and stony, extends about six miles along the river, with one extremity bounded by the sea, and comprises an area of 10,040 statute acres. It contains the two small villages of HILLSIDE and PORT-LETHEN, the latter near the promontory of Girdleness, and now a quoad sacra parish and registration district.
The Caledonian Railway intersects the parish, the population of which in 1871 was 3,052.

MARYCULTER lies on the south side of the Dee, extending from that river to the Grampians; it is of an oblong form, being six miles in length by two in breadth, and containing an area of 7,781 statute acres. The whole parish is rocky, and the surface of the land encumbered with large stones, which are a great obstacle to agricultural improvement. The district is well wooded, and here and there are to be seen some thriving plantations. The population in 1871 numbered 1,110.

BANCHORY-TERNAN, DURRIS, AND STRACHAN.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish lying on the banks of the Dee further up that river than Banchory-Davenick; it is bounded by Strachan on the south, Durris on the east, and Midmar on the north. The village stands on the north side of the Dee at a distance of eighteen miles south-west from Aberdeen. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which was some time ago drained and brought under cultivation. In the centre of it there was an artificial island, built of oak, bearing the ruins of an old mansion or lake house. The parish church, a Free church, and Episcopal and United Presbyterian chapels are the places of worship. The supply of water to the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about three and a half miles above the village of Banchory. The cattle shows of the Deeside Agricultural Society are held at Banchory in July of each year. Fairs are held at Banchory on the last Mondays in January and February, the last Thursday in March, the Monday before the 26th of May, 3rd Tuesday in June, 2nd Tuesday in July (old style), 2nd Tuesday in August, 1st Tuesday (old style) in September, and the 2nd Monday in November and December, respectively, of each year. The parish contains an area of 20,079 statute acres, and in 1871 had a population numbering 2,875, and in 1881, 3,065.

DURRIS parish, which extends about eight miles in length by five and a half in breadth, lies on the south side of the Dee, from which the ground rises, and terminates at the ridge of the Grampian mountains. A great part of the parish has been enclosed, and great improvements effected. The parish is bounded by Maryculter and Fetteresso on the east, and Strachan, Glenbervie, and Banchory-Ternan on the west; from the latter Durris is about three miles distant. There are several lofty mountains in this district. The area of the parish is 15,294 statute acres, and its population in 1871 was 1,021.

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Glenbervie, and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee, and on the north by Banchory-Ternan; it extends eleven miles in length by from seven to nine in breadth, and contains an area of 41,672 statute acres; it is for the greater part a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians; Clochnabane, more than two thousand three hundred feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee and its tributaries, and here it is tolerably well cultivated, and some of it is planted. Population of the parish in 1871, 795, and in 1881, 694.

POST OFFICE, BANCHORY, Betsy Johnston, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive (from Aberdeen) at fifty minutes past eight morning, a quarter-past one afternoon, and a quarter-past six evening, and are despatched thereto at a quarter before nine eight morning, half-past twelve afternoon, and half-past five evening.

BERVIE,

WITH THE VILLAGES AND PARISHES OF GOURDON, ARBUTHNOTT, AND KINNEFF, WITH CATTERLINE.

BERVIE (or INVERBERVIE, as it is frequently written) is a royal burgh, the capital of its parish, and the chief town for many miles; 18 miles N. by E. from Montrose, 10 S. from Stonehaven, and 25 S. from Aberdeen; obligingly situated on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, which river is crossed by a good bridge of a single arch, spanning 103 feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for any vessel almost at any time. The basin could easily be converted into a very commodious and safe harbour, which would be the means of augmenting the general commerce of the place, and revive the fisheries on the coast. The principal trade of the town is the spinning of flax, and the weaving of linen cloth. Bervie is admirably adapted for the purpose of manufacture to any extent; the river is a fine stream, and in the driest season it has always abundance of water; it runs through a large valley, in which the first mill that was ever erected for spinning flax in Scotland stands. The town is well lighted with gas. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter, from King David II., as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather; the place at which he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by David. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors. It joins with Montrose, Arbuthnot, Brechin and Forfar in returning one member to Parliament. The sheriff's small debt court is held at Bervie on the third Monday in January, April, July, and October.

The places of worship are a church of the Establishment and a Free Church. The first mentioned is a handsome modern building of Gothic architecture, and is the principal ornament of the town. The commerce of this place and adjoining villages is benefited by the railway (Montrose and Bervie line), effecting as it does, direct communication between the two towns. The weekly market, a considerable one for grain, as before stated, is held on Wednesday, and the fairs on the Thursday before the 19th of May and September.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE.

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 18 miles N. from Montrose, 7 N. by w. from Bervie, and about 6½ S. by w. from Stonehaven; situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, on the road from the last-named town to Laurencekirk, and it is a station on the Scottish North-Eastern Railway. The village is an assemblage of ill-built houses, so perplexingly arranged as to constitute a bewildering labyrinth. The parish of Glenbervie extends upwards of six miles in length, by a breadth of three in some parts, and five at others; bounded on the w. by the Water of Bervie and Fording, on the s. by Dunnottar and Fetteresso, on the s. and s.e. by Arbuthnott, and on the n. by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil in the upper part of the district is of a bluish clay, and in the lower of a dry fertile loam. The northern part of the parish lies partly among the Grampian Hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west, and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of GLENBERVIE, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family. A Free church and an Episcopal chapel are in Drumlithie, and a church of the Establishment at Glenbervie. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the second Tuesday in October. The parish of Glenbervie contains 15,041 statute acres, and by the returns for 1871 had a population numbering 1,073; of this number, 806 were returned for Drumlithie.

POST OFFICE, DRUMLITHIE, Robert Smith, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive at twenty-five minutes before eight morning and a quarter-past three afternoon, and are despatched at a quarter-past eleven morning and five minutes before six evening.

The nearest Money Order and Telegraph Office is at FORDOUN.

FETTERCAIRN

IS a parish and village—the latter 9½ miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 12 from Montrose, 16½ from Stonehaven, 11 N. from Brechin, and 4½ N. by w. from Laurencekirk, situated on a small streamlet, a tributary to the North Esk. The latter river is crossed by a romantic bridge called the Bridge of Gannaachy, which springs from a precipitous rock, at either extremity, and is elevated to a great height above the water. The village is lighted with gas, and has the advantage of a branch of the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, and there is a large distillery in the immediate vicinity. In the village square is the old cross of Kincardine, an erection of great antiquity. About one mile west is a ruin called Fennella's Castle, connected with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fennella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch, in rebellion. Besides the handsome parish church, there is a Free church and an Episcopal chapel, and two libraries are maintained within the village. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, erected to commemorate the visit of the Queen and Prince Consort on the 21st September, 1861. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns; the ground on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss, on the east it becomes deeper and of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from a stupendous cairn of stone in the neighbourhood, a mountain monument to the heroes who died in some unrecorded battle. Fairs for cattle and hiring servants are held on the day before old Whit Sunday and day before old Martinmas. The parish encloses an area of 18,728 statute acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 1,539; of this number, 391 were returned for the village.

POST OFFICE, FETTERCAIRN, James Strachan, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from Laurencekirk) at thirty minutes past seven morning and twelve noon, and are despatched thereto at eleven morning and three afternoon.

JOHN'S HAVEN, BENHOLM AND ST. CYRUS.

JOHN'S HAVEN is a thriving seaport village in the parish of Benholm, 14 miles south from Stonehaven 4 s.w. from Bervie, and 9 n.e. from Montrose, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare between Aberdeen and Montrose, 29 miles south from the former town, and nine north from the latter. It contains an extensive manufactory for sail cloths, sackings, &c., which, with the weaving of linen cloths and fishing, employ the majority of the inhabitants. There is a good brewery in the village. The parish of Benholm forms a square of nearly three miles, enclosing an area of 4,591 statute acres, lying on the shore of the German Ocean, bounded on the north by Bervie, and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale, beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. The tower of Benholm before the invention of gunpowder, was considered a strong place of defence. The places of worship are the parish kirk, a Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. The Montrose and Bervie Railway passes through the parish, and has a station at John's Haven. The parish contained a population of 1,569 in 1871, of which number 1,077 were returned for John's Haven.

St. CYRUS, sometimes called Ecclesgreig, is a parish and village, the latter situated four miles from John's Haven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, which passes through the district. The parish, which measures seven miles in length by three in breadth, with an area of 8,249 statute acres, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholm on the east, Garvock on the north, Marykirk on the north-west, and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary. The places of worship are the parish and Free churches. There are three schools in the village, the public, the Free church, and an excellent industrial school, built and endowed by the late General Straton, of Kirske, but at the present time is closed for purposes of education; this Peninsula and Waterloo hero also left legacies for the poor of the district. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable, the yearly rental of which amounts to about £2,500, and the river fishings to about £750. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but intersected with several glens and rivulets, and is elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths is arable. The burn in Den Fella forms a beautiful cascade by falling over a rock sixty-three feet in height. The ancient residence of the Barclay family, known by the name of the Kame of Mathers, stands in ruins on a peninsulated rock, the base of which is washed by the sea. The castle of Morphee and Lauriston are also ancient buildings. The parish contains limestone quarries and plenty of excellent freestone. St. Cyrus is a station on the Montrose and Bervie line. The population of the parish in 1871 was 1,535, of which number 530 were returned for St. Cyrus.

LAURENCEKIRK,

MARYKIRK, GARVOCK, AND THE VILLAGE OF LUTHERMUIR.

LAURENCEKIRK, the capital of its parish and the chief town of the Howe, is a thriving and respectable village, 93 miles by N. by E. from Edinburgh, 10 N. from Montrose and 14 S.W. from Stonehaven, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and is a station on the railway to that city. This village, which was formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gudenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1722, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh of barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The village contains a main street nearly a mile in length, one parallel to it, and two or three short ones branching from the principal streets, the whole well lighted with gas. It is governed by a bailie and four councillors, who are chosen every three years, and regulate the police, &c. A sheriff's small debt court is held here three times a year. Branches of the Town and County Bank, Limited, and the North of Scotland Bank, Limited, are established in the town. The parish, which is sometimes called Conveth, is four miles in length, and three at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hill stretches through the whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district, and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the old parish kirk, dedicated to St. Lawrence. Besides the Established church, there is a Free church and Episcopal and Independent chapels. Since 1866 a public hall has been erected by public subscription, at a cost of some £1,400, called St. Lawrence Hall. There is also a good brewery belonging to Messrs. Donald, Cameron & Co. who are famous for their table beer. Fairs are held on the third Wednesday in January (St. Anthony's fair—old style), and cattle fairs on the last Thursday in April and Thursday after the third Tuesday in July (St. James's fair—old style), and the first Thursday in November (new style). Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March, Cattle, horse, and sheep, Thursday after second Tuesday in August (old style), and Monday before last Wednesday in September. Cattle and grain markets are held on every alternate Monday throughout the year. The parish of Laurencekirk has an area extending over 5,612 statute acres, and by the government returns for 1871 contained a population of 2,174; of this number 1,621 were returned for the town. The parish of MARYKIRK lies on the north bank of the North Esk, at the extremity of the Howe or Hollow of the Mearns, and is bounded by Garvock, St. Cyrus, and Laurencekirk on the east, Fettercairn and Fordon on the north, and Fettercairn and the North Esk on the west; it is six miles in length and five in breadth, and embraces an area of 9,841 statute acres. The surface is level, and the soil though various is chiefly fertile; some fine plantations ornament the district, which is interspersed with a few handsome seats. The parish contains two villages, LUTHERMUIR and MARYKIRK; the latter is situated on the road about half-way between Montrose and Laurencekirk. The parish of Marykirk contained at the census for 1871, 1,771 inhabitants; of this number 654 were returned for Luthermuir.

The parish of GARVOCK lies south-east of Laurencekirk, its post town, which is about two and a half miles distant from the centre of the parish. Its length south-westward is fully seven miles, and its greatest breadth is about four miles, embracing an area of 7,986 acres. It is bounded on the south by Marykirk, on the west by Laurencekirk and Fordon, on the north by Arbuthnot, and on the east by Benholm and St. Cyrus. The parish church, a plain building, situated about the centre of the parish, was erected in 1778. About two-thirds of the parish is under cultivation, and the work of reclaiming and improving is still in progress. A cattle and feeding fair, of four days in continuance (called St. James's fair), used to be held on the hill of Garvock, about a half a mile from the church, and was for sometime the most important in the county, but has fallen greatly off, and been transferred to Laurencekirk. On the summit of Garvock hill there are two large Druidical cairns. The parish of Garvock had, in 1871, a population of 476.

STONEHAVEN,

WITH THE PARISHES OF COOKNEY, FETTERESSO AND DUNNOTTAR.

STONEHAVEN (or Stonehive) is a seaport and the county town of Kincardine, 94 miles N. by E. from Edinburgh, 68 N.E. from Perth, 66 S.S.E. from Banff, 35 N. by E. from Arbroath, 28 W. from Montrose, 15 S. from Aberdeen, and 10 N.N.E. from Bervie. It is situated within a mile of a station on the Scottish North-Eastern line of railway, on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, in the bottom of a bay, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The place, which is considerable though not a royal burgh, is composed of an old and new town; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsular, or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso. The two towns are connected by a bridge, forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre; in this square stands a handsome market house, erected in 1827, surmounted by a handsome spire 130 feet in height. The new town hall in Allardice street, which stands opposite the market house, was erected in 1878 at a cost of £4,000 by public subscription, and is vested in trustees; it is a fine building and contains news, billiard and reading rooms. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and on the north-east by a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade; and occasionally in exporting grain to Leith. During the season a herring fishery is carried on to the great advantage of the place. The celebrated Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and there are besides an extensive woollen manufactory, a tannery and a brewery. There are three banking houses, a savings bank, and several good inns. The sheriff's ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session, and a sheriff's small debt court on the same day during the sitting of the first-mentioned court. A newspaper, the Stonehaven Journal, is published here every Thursday. The Established churches of Dunnottar and Fetteresso are situated near the town; there are also a Free church, an United Presbyterian, an Episcopal and a Roman Catholic chapel. There are three cemeteries in the proximity of the town, namely, at FETTERESSO and COWIE, one mile and a half respectively from the town, and at DUNNOTTAR, one mile distant; there is also at the latter distance an attractive garden open to the public. The principal object that can awaken interest in the vicinity of Stonehaven is Dunnottar Castle, about a mile and a half south of the town; it is seated on a perpendicular rock, one hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea, about three acres in extent, and almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The entrance is by a square tower of great strength, within high water mark; the skeleton of the structure still occupies one-half of the summit of the rock, and forms one of the most majestic piles of ruins in Scotland. This castle withstood a long siege by Cromwell's army, and its ultimate surrender was upon honourable terms; it was often used as a state prison, and several of the nonconforming presbyterian clergy were compelled to be its inmates. It was built during the contest between Bruce and Balaol, by an ancestor of the Marischal family. It was dismantled shortly after the civil war of 1715, when its proprietor, James, Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason; since that period (the direct line of succession having failed) the castle became by purchase the property of the nearest heir male, Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, Knight Marischal of Scotland, and is now the property of Sir Patrick Keith Murray, Bart., of Auchtertyre and Dunnottar. Though dismantled, the stone work of the fortress is yet pretty entire, their being in general nothing wanting except the roofs and the floors; the battlements, the formidable towers and airy turrets full of loopholes for the archer and musketeer, the hall for the banquet and the cell for the captive, are all alike entire, and their respective limits and divisions distinct. It was in this castle, during the Commonwealth, that the regalia of Scotland was placed; which was afterwards conveyed away and secreted under the pulpit in the parish church of Kinneff. The regular weekly market is held on Thursday, and there is another for cattle and grain on that day from Martinmas to Candlemas. Fairs—May 25th, for hiring servants; on the third Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August (old style), for cattle; November 21st for hiring servants, and the Thursday before Christmas Day (old style), for cattle. The population of Stonehaven was in 1871 8,396.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunoyter, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of five miles and from thence about five miles north; adjoining on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenbervie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of that hill, where Dunnottar and Glenbervie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The principal object of interest in the parish is the castle previously mentioned, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church; the seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, one of which extends more than 150 yards, which render Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. The old town of Stonehaven, is in this parish, near to which is situate the parish church. The parish embraces an area of 7,783 acres; and in 1871 had a population numbering 2,102.

COOKNEY, erected a quoad sacra parish and registration district in 1859, was taken from the northern side of Fetteresso. The parish church, which is about central, is five miles from Stonehaven, and about a mile from the village of SKATERO. It is bounded on the west by the parish of Durris, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory-Davenick (that part known as the quoad sacra parish of Port-Lethen), on the east by the German Ocean, and on the south by Fetteresso; it is about six miles long from west to east, and four miles broad, the soil along the coast is well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west; most of this was common until about fifteen years ago, when it was divided among the neighbouring heritors, and it is now under cultivation and much improved. At MUGHALLS is a coast-guard station, and a station on the Scottish North-Eastern Railway; and here fairs are held on the first Tuesday in May for cattle and horses; Tuesday before second Wednesday in June, first Tuesday in August, first Tuesday in October (o.s.), for cattle and horses. There are two fishing villages, SKATERO and STRANATHRO in the parish.

FETTERESSO is a parish about ten miles in length, and between five and six in breadth, enclosing an area of 27,245 statute acres. It is bounded on the south by the parish of Dunnottar, on the west by Glenbervie, Durris and Maryculter, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory-Davenick, and on the east by the German Ocean. The northern part of the parish is Cookney, now created a separate parish for ecclesiastical and registration matters. The principal streams are the Carron and Cowie, which run from west to east; the former divides the parish from Dunnottar for about five miles, entering the sea at Stonehaven; the latter has a similar course and termination. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of R. W. Duff, Esq. M.P., and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but since rebuilt and extended. The new town of Stonehaven is in this parish, near to which is the parish church, also the village of Cowie one mile and a half distant, which contains a cemetery. The parish contained in 1871, a population of 5,665.

KINROSS-SHIRE.

THIS is a small inland county, situated on the western boundary of Fifeshire, toward its south-western quarter, from which it was severed in the year 1426; Fife also bounds it on the southern side, and Perthshire lies on its northern and its western limits. At the revolution, Kinross being considered too small a county as it then stood, was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish, and Tulliebole, which parishes before that period formed a portion of Fifeshire. The general figure of the county is somewhat circular, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west about thirteen miles; and from north to south about twelve miles. The total superficies of the county amounts to seventy square miles of land, and seven of lakes; of cultivated land about 27,700 acres, and of uncultivated about 18,400 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the "head of the peninsula."

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE, &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochill hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern; Benarty hill the south-eastern; and Cleish hills the south and south-western; these eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places suited to cultivation, and exhibit many pleasing and productive arable fields. The original condition of Ross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch, the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic, namely: the district has the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent in this part of the country than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appear, were feued about the commencement of the eighteenth century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of "runrig," it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, enclosing, and planting—can compete with those of Fife and most other districts. Drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions in this particular quarter, productive arable fields present themselves, where, only comparatively a few years ago, nothing met the view but desolate moors and sombre mosses. At this day many good roads intersect the shire; and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving, comfort-inspiring plantations. The mineralogy of Kinross-shire is a subject of limited importance; although coal abounds in some localities, no works for raising it have yet been established; whinstone has been found in several parishes, so has sandstone, of the best quality; of limestone there is plenty, and it has been wrought profitably.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney on the south boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross; and the North Quelch, on the north boundary of the parish—all which, and a few rivulets beside, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (which we shall have to notice particularly under Kinross town) lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven there are a few small minor lakes, or (as they are properly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. On the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway, there is a station at the town of Kinross; and also one on the Devon Valley branch of the same railway.

KINROSS-SHIRE comprises only four complete parishes, and three parts of parishes; it possesses only one town, Kinross—with a large populous village in its neighbourhood, called Milnathort. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannanshire in returning one member to the Imperial Parliament; the present member being John Blair Balfour, Esq., q.c. Lord Advocate for Scotland. The parliamentary constituency in 1881-82, numbered 641. The lord lieutenant is Sir Graham Graham Montgomery, Bart. According to the census returns for 1871, the county contained a population of 3,390 males, and 3,308 females; total, 7,198; the figures given in 1881 were: males, 3,112; females, 3,587; total, 6,699; showing a decrease of 499. The number of inhabited houses in the shire at the last named period was 1,707; uninhabited, 201; building, 12.

KINROSS AND MILNATHORT,

WITH ORWELL, FOSSOWAY AND TULLIEBOLE, CROOK OF DEVON, ARNGASK, DAMHEAD, PORTMOAK, AND CLEISH.

KINROSS, the capital of its county and parish, and a burgh under the Police and General Improvement Act, is a town of considerable antiquity. It is 27 miles N. from Edinburgh, 19 s.w. from Cupar-Fife, 17 s. from Perth, and 10 N. from Dunfermline, which last-named town is approached by a branch line of the North British Railway. The town occupies a pleasant site at the foot of the open vale to which it gives name, on the north-western shore of Loch Leven. It formerly consisted of a number of sinuous lanes, composed of buildings of antique appearance, bordering on the lake; in later times it has undergone many extensive improvements in the erection of new houses, particularly in the main street, through which is the road to the north. In this street are the principal inns and shops. There are two woollen spinning mills in the town, and shawl weaving is carried on. As Kinross is the capital of the county, the courts of the sheriff sit here every Tuesday during session, and occasionally during vacation; justice of peace courts are held as required. The County Buildings, in which the courts are held, is a handsome edifice, erected in 1836, at a cost of £2,000; a police station has since been added. A town hall was built by subscription some years ago, on the site of the old parish church, but being found too small for many purposes, a more commodious structure was built in 1868. The places of worship are the parish church, a handsome Gothic erection, of modern date; a Free church, two United Presbyterian churches, and an Episcopal chapel; the latter, dedicated to St. Paul, is a very neat edifice of Gothic architecture, recently erected. There are also two public schools, one of which, a large and commodious building, has lately been renovated. The Kinross-shire Advertiser newspaper is published here. Originally the vicinity of Kinross was dignified by a castle of great strength, situated on a promontory jutting into the lake, and of which the town was a dependence. This ancient stronghold, long the residence of the Earls of Morton, was removed upwards of a century ago, and the promontory is now occupied by Kinross House, a structure designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House, and many other mansions, in the style of the time of Charles II. The environs of the town derive much of their beauty from the pleasure grounds and exuberant plantations around this edifice, which stands near the northern entrance to the town, and opposite to the island and castle of Queen Mary, on Loch Leven. This noble sheet of water is ten miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies nearly a hundred English acres; upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), of which only a fragment now remains. On another stand the ruins of the Castle of Loch Leven, once the seat of the Douglases, and in recent times rendered celebrated by Sir Walter Scott in his novel of "The Abbot." Here the unfortunate Queen Mary was confined. The place where the Queen landed upon her escape from the island castle, May 2nd, 1568, has been variously stated. There seems, however, more reason for believing that it was in the neighbourhood of the churchyard. In corroboration of this is the finding, in 1805, of a number of keys, supposed to be those thrown into the loch when the queen made her escape; also the discovery of eight small keys of antique make in the same bearings, but nearer to the castle. The first mentioned are now in possession of the Earl of Morton, the others being in the Antiquarian Museum of Edinburgh. A fine walk by the water is much resorted to in good weather. The loch is stored with trout of a red colour and first-rate quality, eels, perch, pike, &c. The excellent sport obtained, and the other attractions of the locality draw a yearly increasing number of visitors. The fishing season begins on the first of January, and closes on the 31st of August. Rod fishing begins generally in April, for which there is an ample supply of boats on the loch. The North British Railway Company have two stations in the town, one at the junction of the Fife and Kinross, and the Devon Valley railways, by which lines communication is open to Ladybank, Alloa, and Stirling; the other station (Loch Leven) is on a branch line which runs to Cowdenbeath, and there joins the company's line between Dunfermline and Thornton. There is also a station at Balado, on the Devon Valley branch, 8 miles from the village of Cleish, and about 2½ from Kinross. At the hamlet of TILLYCHIE, in the parish, and 3 miles distant from the town of Kinross, there is a woollen spinning mill. A market, principally for the sale of corn, is held in Kinross on Mondays, and there are live stock sales on alternate Mondays. Fairs are also held in Kinross on the fourth Monday of March, second Monday of June, fourth Monday of July, and fourth Monday of October, and there are hirings on the fourth Monday in July, and Thursday after second Tuesday in October. The parish of Kinross contains an area of 7,275 statute acres, and at the census taken in 1871 had a population of 2,477, and in 1881, 2,492; of this number 1,960 were returned for the town.

ORWELL is a parish situated to the north of Kinross and Loch Leven. It is of an oblong form; its greatest length from east to west is 7½ miles; its greatest breadth from north to south is about 2½ miles. The greater part of Orwell is fine arable land, well enclosed and planted. On the low ground, towards the lake, stand the ruins of the ancient castle of Burreigh, formerly the residence of Lord Burreigh.

MILNATHORT, popularly designated Mills of Forth, is a considerable village in the parish of Orwell, 1½ miles north-east from Kinross. It is neatly built, and is one of the most thriving and industrious villages within the county. It is a station on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway. The government of the village is carried on by a committee of the inhabitants. In the centre of the village is the public hall, which is one of the chief ornaments, being surmounted by a spire, with clock. There are three places of worship—the Parish church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian church. The latter is a handsome Gothic building, with a spire 125 feet high, and was erected in 1868, at a cost of £3,000. Another ornamental building deserving of notice is a school erected by the liberality of James Brand, Esq. of London, in memory of his father, who was a native of the village. There is also a public school. A corn market is held and a live stock sale takes place on Wednesday; these stock sales are the most important in the county. The inhabitants are principally employed in woollen shawl (hand-loom) weaving. There are also a spinning mill and a linen power-loom factory, which find employment for a number of hands.

MIDDLETON, DALQUEICH, and SEEGIE are hamlets of the parish, from one to two miles distant from Milnathort. The Mawearse station, on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British Railway, is in this parish, about two miles distant from Milnathort. Acreage, 13,133. Population of the parish in 1871, 2,248, and in 1881, 2,031, of which number Milnathort contained 1,269.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE is an united parish in the west of Kinross-shire. In shape it is very irregular; the area is about 50 square miles, a portion being occupied by the eastern extremity of the Ochils. It is bounded on the north by Dunning, on the east by Orwell and Kinross, on the south by Cleish, Torryburn, and Saline, and on the west and north-west by Clackmannanshire and Muckart. Fossoway is partly in the county of Kinross and partly in that of Perth, the latter county embracing the greater part of it. Fossoway and Tulliebole were formed into one parish about the year 1614. The parish has two small agricultural villages, named CROOK OF DEVON and BLAIRINGONE, and the hamlets of POWMILL and CARNBO. Besides the parish church at Crook of Devon, there is a quoad sacra church at Blairingone, and also a Free church in the parish; and there are also public schools.

About two miles from Crook of Devon, following the course of the river, and about seven from Kinross, is the celebrated Rumbling Bridge, and a little farther on is the equally famous Cauldron Lims. The scenery in the neighbourhood of these falls is such as is not often met with, and since the opening of the Devon Valley Railway the locality has become much frequented by tourists. CROOK OF DEVON and RUMBLING BRIDGE are stations on the Devon Valley Railway. Acreage, 17,333. Population of the parish in 1871, 1,461, and in 1881, 1,267.

ARNGASK is a parish lying partly in the three counties of Kinross, Fife, and Perth, and DAMHEAD, its village, is partly in each, situated on the highway to Perth, and is 6½ miles distant from Kinross. The form of the parish is nearly circular, and it is about four miles in diameter. The country here is hilly, and more pastoral than arable. The Farg, dividing the Perthshire portion of the parish from the others, together with other streams in the vicinity, afford good sport to the angler. The beautiful scenery in the valley of the Farg is justly admired. The parish contains an Established church, a Free church, and a public school. The nearest stations are Gateaside and Mawearse, on the Fife and Kinross Railway, both distant about three miles from Damhead. Acreage, 6,450. Population in 1871, 568, and in 1881, 547.

PORTMOAK is a parish lying round the east of Loch Leven. It is bounded on the north by Strathmiglo, on the east by Leslie and Kinglissie, on the south by Auchtermuchty and Ballynry, and on the west by Kinross and Orwell. Like Fossoway its outline is irregular; length from north-west to south-east nearly 6½ miles, greatest breadth 3½ miles; embracing an area of 9,957 statute acres. It contains the villages or hamlets of BALGEDIE, KINNESSWOOD, and SCOTLANDWELL, situated respectively about four and a half, five and six miles east of Kinross, the inhabitants of which are employed in agriculture and weaving. Bishopfold, the western peak of the Lomonds, is in this parish, and occupies a large portion of the area in the north-east. This hill is 1,150 feet above Loch Leven and 1,492 feet above sea level, and contains lime and freestone quarries. Wells of pure water are numerous on the west side of the hill, and in one place, near Scotlandwell, there are three, with a copious flow of water not far from each other. Andrew Winton, the chronicler of Scotland, was a native of this parish, and it was for twenty-eight years under the charge of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the founders of the Secession church. The village of Kinnesswood is also famous as the birthplace of Michael Bruce. The house in which the poet was born, and in which he died, has been lately restored. There are three places of worship in the parish, the parish church, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian church, the two former situated between Kinnesswood and Scotlandwell, and the latter at Balgedie; there is also a public school in the parish. The nearest stations are Mawearse, on the Fife and Kinross Railway, about two miles north-west of Kinnesswood and three from Scotlandwell; and Leslie, in Fifehire, on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British Railway, a mile farther distant in the opposite direction. Population in 1871, 1,193, and in 1881, 1,043.

CLEISH is a parish of an oblong form, stretching east and west. Its length is about six and its breadth about two miles. It is two miles from the town of Kinross, and Kinross parish forms its northern boundary. On the east it is bounded by Ballynry, on the south by Beath, and on the west by Dunfermline and Fossoway. A range of hills called Cleish hills runs along the western end of the parish, affording fine pasture for sheep. The rest of the soil is under tillage, which is the chief employment of the inhabitants. There are quarries of fine freestone in the parish, and coal is extensively wrought on the estate of BLAIRADAM, which occupies a large part of this parish and of Beath and Dunfermline, and is the seat of Chas. E. Adam, Esq. J.P. son of the late Right Honourable William P. Adam, who for some time was member of Parliament for the united counties of Clackmannan and Kinross, and, at the time of his death, was governor of Madras, India. The villages are CLEISH, four miles from Kinross, where the parish church and public school are situated, MARYBERGH, four and a half miles, and KILTY, five miles distant. The Blairadam station, on the Kinross-shire branch of the North British Railway, is in this parish, three miles distant from Kinross. Acreage, 6,201. Population in 1871, 589, and in 1881 498.

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

COMMONLY called a STEWARTRY, but in reality and to all intents and purposes a sheriffdom or shire, lies on the south of Scotland, and forms the eastern and by far the most extensive portion of the ancient district of Galloway. It is bounded by Dumfries-shire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Frith and the Irish Sea; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtonshire (or Western Galloway) and Wigton bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about forty-four miles, by a breadth varying from twenty to thirty miles, the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits; it comprises a superficies of 954 square miles, or 610,343 statute acres. About one-half of the whole surface may be said to be brought into cultivation.

EARLY HISTORY.—It appears that the denomination of "Stewartry" originated at the period when, by the forfeiture of the possessions of the Balliols, the Cummins, and their various vassals, this district became the property of the Crown, when it is understood to have been first put under the authority of a royal STEWART; in subsequent times the office of steward, in the appointment of the king, was one of much honour, and was often the subject of contest. For a considerable lapse of time, however, after the establishment of a separate stewardship, the district was still in some measure esteemed to be politically attached to Dumfries-shire, but this nominal connection was formally dissolved before the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. From the force of ancient usage, the appellation of steward, instead of that of sheriff, has, down to the present day, been popularly continued, although, by the civil arrangements of modern times, there is not the least difference in the two offices. Events in early times, possessing considerable interest, are more immediately connected with Kirkcudbright, its capital, which was frequently visited by and occasionally became the abode of royalty. Edward I. spent some time there during the warfare of 1300; and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI., with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in that town.

SOIL, SURFACE, PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The soil of the county is principally composed of a thin mould or a brownish loam mixed with sand, and is incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock; the whole surface is interspersed with meadows and mingled with moss. The shire has no statistical sub-divisions, except that four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells, and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of "Glenkins." The aspect of the country, however, forms a very natural distinction into two divisions: if a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Iron-Gray parish to the Gatehouse of Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is so mountainous, that it may with propriety be termed a Highland district; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country—a contrast strikingly obvious. The principal eminences in the shire are Criffell (or Crawfell), 1,800 feet; Cairnsmuir, 1,723; Blencairn, 1,200; and Cairn, 1,000 above the level of the sea. Anciently the greater proportion of the land was covered with a forest, which is now eradicated, or to be traced only in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appears that, so early as the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the assiduity of the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin, to be manufactured into flour, in which state it was brought back to victual the various strongholds and castles held by that monarch. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats, the culture of barley, peas, and beans, being very limited. This age of agricultural prosperity was succeeded by destructive intestine wars, fanaticism, improvidence, and consequent misery, which lasted four hundred years, and reduced the country to a desert. It was not until the beginning of the eighteenth century that any measures were adopted to form a resuscitation of its agricultural capabilities, which for so long a period had lain dormant. The enclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt of a series of improvements; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the rural population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of "levellers," and proceeded to demolish the newly-formed boundaries, under the influence of some extravagantly wild notions as to a natural general right in property; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed for that purpose. This mischievous result of ignorance having been overcome, however, and the "levelling" delusion dissipated, the county steadily advanced in an accelerated degree of improvement; and towards the close of the same century the district could compete with Dumfries and other adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The number of horses, cattle, and sheep reared in the county is sufficiently large to evince the possession of much practical knowledge, and consequent success, in this branch of productive economy; and the breed of swine has increased to a prodigious extent, these animals being now a staple commodity both for home consumption and exportation. The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland, and there is very little freestone. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carluwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell marl; ironstone, copper, barytes, and lead ore also abound, but the deficiency of coal presents some obstruction to either being made available for the smelting process. Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Frith affords every opportunity for the capture of the inhabitants of the deep. The manufacture of linen, woollen and cotton goods engages a small number of hands in the towns and villages.

RIVERS, &c.—Like other mountainous countries, this is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers: these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Ure. The Ken is considered the largest, receiving in its course numerous rivulets which drain the neighbouring hills, and even affording an asylum to the waters of the Dee, although the latter assumes the appellative privilege after entering the Ken. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Frith or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Frith, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of forty-five miles; and along the shore of this beautiful estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. The principal towns in the county are now connected with the north and south by means of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway from Dumfries to Kirkcudbright, and the Caledonian line from Castle Douglas, on by Parton and Creetown, to Stranraer and Portpatrick.

The shire, or stewartry, comprises twenty-eight parishes, and contains two royal burghs—Kirkcudbright and New Galloway; the latter, in conjunction with Wigton, and Whithorn (in Wigtonshire), sends one member to Parliament; and the stewartry, like the other counties in Scotland, returns another; the gentleman representing the latter being John Maxwell-Heron, Esq. In 1818-23, the parliamentary constituency numbered 2,248. The Lord-Lieutenant is the Earl of Selkirk. From the census returns for the year 1871, it appears that the county of Kirkcudbright contained a population of 19,497 males, and 22,362 females; total, 41,859. In 1831, the figures given were: males, 19,796; females, 23,330; total, 43,126; showing an increase in the ten years of 267. There were in the shire at the latter period 8,400 houses inhabited, 502 uninhabited, and 35 in course of erection.

AUCHENCAIRN AND DUNDRENNAN IN RERWICK.

AUCHENCAIRN, the principal village in the parish of Rerwick, and Union and Stewart Court of Kirkcudbright, is eight miles south from Castle Douglas, ten east from Kirkcudbright, and twenty-one south-west from Dumfries; situated on the main road between the two last-named towns. It is now rising into a village of some importance, in consequence of its excellent sea bathing, for which purpose it is much frequented during the summer months. There are several mines in this neighbourhood of barytes, copper and iron, which are worked on a small scale. In the village are two hotels, both affording excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors. In the mouth of Auchencairn bay lies the small island of Heston, which stands high out of the water, and affords excellent pasture for sheep, and there are rabbits in great numbers. A fair is held on the first Monday after the 16th of August.

DUNDRENNAN is a small village in the same parish as Auchencairn, four miles therefrom, deriving its chief, indeed only, importance from having in its vicinity the ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the greatest attraction in this part of the country. This abbey, the venerable remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. The church was built, as usual, in the form of a cross, with the spire rising two hundred feet from the centre. The body was one hundred and twenty feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, with a grass plot in the centre. From what remains of the edifice, the whole must have been built in a style of great taste and architectural beauty. The buildings are now greatly dilapidated, and are almost entirely covered with a pale grey-coloured moss, which gives a character of peculiar and almost airy-lightness to the lofty columns and Gothic arches, many of which are entire. This sacred edifice afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland. Tradition has traced, with accuracy her course from Langside to the scene of her embarkation for England. She arrived at this spot in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery, then a magnificent and extensive building. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at the nearest point of the coast; the road from the religious establishment thither runs through a secluded valley of surpassing beauty, and leads directly to the shore, where the rock is still pointed out by the peasantry from which the hapless queen embarked on her death-destined voyage; it is situated in a little creek, surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks, and called "Port-Mary," in commemoration of the event. The scene is analogously wild and sublime; and besides being inspiritive of melancholy associations in the mind of the poet or romantic tourist, the coast here and in the neighbourhood merits the attention of the painter and the investigation of the mineralogist. The entire parish of Rerwick embraces an area of 19,980 acres, and contained a population in 1871 of 1,911, and in 1881, 1,807; of this number 483 were returned for Auchencairn.

CASTLE DOUGLAS IN KELTON,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BRIDGE OF DEE, KELTON HILL, GELSTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a modern, neat, and thriving town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Kelton, Parochial Union and Steward of Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, 90 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 18 w. by s. from Dumfries, 15 n.e. from Gatehouse, and 10 n.n.e. from Kirkcudbright; situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant fertile district on the banks of the Carlinwark water, from which loch the original name of the place was derived. It is a station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries line of Railway. In 1792 it was erected by the proprietor into a burgh of barony by its present appellation, and its government vested in a provost, two bailies, and seven councillors. Eighty years ago it was composed of but a few detached houses; it has now a large number of respectable dwellings, laid out in regular streets, the principal one lining the public road. Altogether Castle Douglas may be considered one of the most respectable and prosperous market towns, although not of remote origin, in the south of Scotland. The Town Hall is a handsome structure, situated in St. Andrew street; it is built of red sandstone, at a cost of £1,300. In connection with it is a market hall and reading room, and a court is also held on the first Wednesday of each month for the recovery of small debts. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland, Limited, the British Linen Company's Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland, Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland, Limited; these branches facilitate its monetary transactions. A National Security Savings Bank, established in 1840, is a flourishing institution, and has been the means of doing much good. The number of depositors was in 1881, 867, and the amount of deposits £17,649 17s. 9d. A newspaper published weekly, the Kirkcudbrightshire Advertiser, on Friday, is well conducted, and has a good circulation in the district. On the south-west side of the town are the ruins of the ancient castle of Threave; and on its south-east quarter stands the modern and elegant mansion of Gelston Castle (formerly called Douglas Castle, now the residence of Mrs. Maitland-Kirwan. Carlinwark loch, before mentioned, is upwards of a mile in length, and occupies one hundred and eighteen acres; before it was partially drained, however, by the canal cut from it to the river Dee, its area was much greater. It contains a number of small islands, but whether the islands have been artificially formed upon them, as some think, or they have been placed there with intent to support some vast superstructure, cannot now be decided. The lake is plentifully stored with pike and perch. Two miles s.w. from Castle Douglas is the Established church; it is a plain structure, ornamented with a handsome belfry. The church is capable of accommodating 1,000 persons, all the seats being either allocated to the proprietors, or let to the parishioners of Kelton. There are two Free churches in Castle Douglas, one with a red sandstone steeple, in King street, and the other situated in Queen street. Near Carlinwark loch stands the Castle Douglas a Quoad Sacra parish church, a handsome building of Gothic architecture, built in 1868. The United Presbyterian and Reformed Presbyterian churches have no pretensions to architectural display. The Roman Catholics have also a handsome chapel. The Episcopal church, which is dedicated to St. Ninian, is a handsome granite structure, in the early English style of architecture. There are two public schools, and one female school under private management in Castle Douglas. The principal public school, a handsome building with small tower, erected in 1877, is situated near the top of Cotton street. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appears to have been the arena of much contest during the feudal system, when the ancient Douglasses dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of this district; for on the west side of the town are still visible encampments and breast works, evidently thrown up against the castle; and on the south-west bank of the loch is a spot still termed the "gallows lot," or "plot," said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake before noticed, lived, it is said a blacksmith named M'Kim, or M'Min, and his sons; they made the large cannon called "Mons Meg," shown at Edinburgh Castle; it was formed in staves, and hooped round like a cask. The market (a large one) for grain in winter, and cattle in summer, is held on Mondays; and grain is sold by sample and exported, some to England and some to the North of Scotland. Fairs February 11th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses. The parish of Kelton comprises 11,222 statute acres, and contained in 1871 a population of 3,222, and in 1881, 3,225, the town of Castle Douglas having 2,529 of that number.

KELTON HILL, or Rhone House, is a small village in the same parish as and about two miles and a half from Castle Douglas. The extensive horse fairs formerly held here have been transferred to its more fortunate neighbour, Castle Douglas.

Nearly two miles from Carlinwark loch, in Kelton parish, is the small village of GILSTON, or GELSTON, and its castle, formerly called Douglas Castle, but now Gelston Castle, and then the seat of the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, the founder of Castle Douglas. The present building, modern and elegant, is the residence of Mrs. Maitland-Kirwan. About two miles on the road towards Kirkcudbright, is a small village called the BRIDGE OF DEE, a station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Castle Douglas and Dumfries line.

CREETOWN IN KIRKMABRECK

Is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of KIRKMABRECK, and union of Kirkcudbright, 117 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 12 w. from Gatehouse, about 6 s.e. from Newton-Stewart, 8 from Wigton, across the ferry, and 20 n.w. from Kirkcudbright. It was formerly called Ferry Town of Cree, and derived that appellation, doubtless, from its situation—the town being situated on the east side of the creek of the river Cree, at the head of Wigton bay, and opposite the peninsula, on which stands the town of Wigton. It is a place of but little consequence as connected with commerce, the only trade it possesses being almost confined to the importation of coal and lime, and the exportation of grain and granite. There are granite quarries, the granite being of a very fine quality; that worked by the Bagbie Granite Co. is used extensively for monumental purposes; another quarry is worked by the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board; and another by Messrs. G. & J. Mossman, of Glasgow; lead and copper are also found in the hills above the village. The old mail road from Portpatrick to Dumfries passes through the town, and there is a station on the Portpatrick Railway, within a mile distant. This place is the property of Mrs. Isabella Grant, whose mansion is a great ornament to it; and there are some few other handsome residences in the neighbourhood. The church, erected in 1834, is a neat building; connected with it is a public School. The parish of Kirkmabreck embraces an area of 23,031 statute acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 1,586; and in 1881, 1,834.

CROSSMICHAEL,

GREENLAW, PARTON AND CORSOCK.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the parochial union of Kirkcudbright. The village is a small one, 91 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 19 s.w. from Dumfries, and 9 s.e. from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Laurieston and Castle Douglas, Crossmichael being distant five miles from the former town, and three and a half from the latter. In the village is the parish church, the patron saint of which, prior to the Reformation, was St. Michael, and hence the name, though of the cross there are neither remains nor traditions preserved. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the Dee water, furnish good perch and pike fishing. In this parish is GREENLAW, formerly the residence of Robert, fourth Viscount Kenmure, who died in 1663 at the old fortress of Greenlaw, the remains of which still exist. Robert Gordon, son of William, sixth Viscount Kenmure, who was beheaded on Tower Hill, 24th February, 1716, succeeded to the estate in 1737; and finding the old tower in a very dilapidated condition, he commenced the erection of the present house, which he had not completed when he died on the 10th August, 1741. From that time the estate of Greenlaw continued in the possession of the Gordons till Whit Sunday, 1880, when it was conveyed by sale to John Ross Coulthart, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the county of Lancaster, banker. Besides the remains of the old fortalice of Greenlaw, there are also in this parish the foundations of a large monastery, of which even tradition has not preserved the name, though it is said that the superstructure was removed to furnish materials for erecting the old castle of Threave, which stands at a very short distance. The Barony Isle of the river Dee is said to have been a consecrated spot in the days of the ancient Britons, where the Druids had a temple in the midst of a grove of oaks, from whence they administered sacerdotal rites, and offered up human sacrifices. There is also pointed out in this parish a Roman burying-place, several Pictish cairns, in which human bones have been found; and instances of British encampments, near which stone weapons of various descriptions have been discovered. A fair is held on the 29th of October if it falls on a Thursday, if not then on the Thursday after. The parish of Cross-michael encloses an area of 999 statute acres, and contained in 1871 a population numbering 1,492, and in 1881, 1,343.

PARTON parish lies along the banks of the Dee, that water being its western, and the Urr its eastern, boundary; it extends from six to seven miles in length, its breadth varying from four to six, and embraces an area of 15,841 statute acres. A large portion of this parish is hilly, heathy, and pastoral, especially in the northern quarter; towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation. What may be called the village, contains but a few houses. The church (a neat building erected in 1834) and the manse are about three miles from Crossmichael. The latter occupies a very pleasant situation fronting the river, and is surrounded by hills and wood. There are several handsome residences in this parish, amongst which may be mentioned Parton House, the residence of B. Rigby Murray, Esq., of Manchester. The population of the parish was in 1871, 737; and in 1881, 693.

Corscock, formerly in Parton parish, is now a parish of itself, for ecclesiastical purposes only. Population in 1871, 563; and in 1881, 549.

DALBEATTIE-IN-URR,

PALNACKIE-IN-BUTTLE AND KIPPFORD-IN-COLVEND.

DALBEATTIE is a burgh in the parish of Urr, Union and Stewart Court of Kirkcudbright, 87 miles s.s.w. from Edinburgh, 13½ n. by E. from Kirkcudbright, the like distance s.w. from Dumfries, and 6 from Castle Douglas, most eligibly situated on the Dalbeattie burn, a rivulet which falls into the water of Urr, which latter is here navigable for vessels of seventy or eighty tons. This harbour, which is called Dub-o'-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Frith, and is greatly improved. A line of railway from Dumfries to Portpatrick, Castle Douglas and Kirkcudbright passes through this place, and possesses a station here. The burgh has great advantages in respect to situation for a maritime trade, having a communication by sea with the western ports, and, by means of the before-mentioned railway, with many large inland towns; it possesses some large falls of water, capable of turning any kind of machinery. The mills now in operation are a paper, a bobbin, a corn mill and two for sawing timber, the whole propelled by water; there is also an extensive iron forge, the hammers of which are also worked by the same power. Large granite quarries and granite polishing works are in this neighbourhood worked by the Messrs. Newalls, and Messrs. Shearer, Field & Co., and employing some hundreds of men. In the town are places of worship for Presbyterians, Evangelical Unionists and Roman Catholics; there are also a mechanics' institute and reading room, four comfortable inns and a fine bowling green. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie is Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells, of Terregles. It is a fine old ruin, and mentioned as the place where Mary Queen of Scots passed a night on her way for Edinburgh, after the Solway Frith to England, after the battle of Langside Moor. Within the parish, on the banks of the river about a mile below Urr church, is the Mote of Urr, an artificial mount rising from the centre of elevated circles, and used in primitive times as a court of Judicature by the petty chiefs of this district of Galloway. The government of the burgh is vested in nine commissioners, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards into which the burgh is divided. The town is lighted with gas. The parish of Urr contains an area of 15,426 statute acres, and in 1871 the population was 4,006, and in 1881, 5,490, of this number 4,140 were returned for Dalbeattie.

PALNACKIE, or GARDEN, is the principal village in the parish of Buittle, Parochial Union and Stewart Court of Kirkcubright, 18 miles s.w. from Dumfries, 14 N. from Kirkcubright, and 6 s. of Castle Douglas, agreeably situated on the water of Urr, where there is a good harbour, having at ordinary spring tides a depth of thirty feet of water, and capable of receiving vessels of two hundred tons burthen. Since the extension of the railway system in the Stewarty, the fishing trade has greatly fallen away. It used to be the chief port for supplying the surrounding neighbourhood with coal and various other sea-borne necessities. The parish is bounded on the east by the Urr, on the south by the Solway Frith, and on the west by Kelton. It is a fertile and agricultural district, eight miles in length and three in breadth, and contains an area of 11,391 statute acres, with a population in 1871 of 1,026, and in 1881 991.

COLVEND is a parish adjoining Kirkbeath. It is entirely agricultural, and is only remarkable for its scenery. KIPPFORD and ROCKLIFFE are two villages in this parish, which in 1871 had a population of 1,518, and in 1881, 1,281.

GATEHOUSE-OF-FLEET,

AND PARISHES OF GIRTHON AND ANWOTH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GATEHOUSE is a neat modern town, partly in the parish of Anwoth, but chiefly in that of Girthon, and union of Kirkcudbright, 105 miles s.s.w. from Edinburgh, 60 miles E. of Portpatrick, 83 s.w. from Dumfries, and 9 w. from Kirkcudbright; charmingly seated in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed within hills and lofty eminences, which form a spacious and delightful amphitheatre. Some of the hills have their sides clothed and their summits crowned with woods, interspersed with rich pasture, while the higher and more distant mountains penetrate the clouds. The town is well built, regular and clean, the houses being generally of the same height, the streets running in straight lines and crossing each other at right angles. Near the centre of the High street stands a square tower of grey granite, 75 feet high, which had its origin in a sum of £30, left by Andrew Findlay, a watchmaker, in the year 1867, for the purpose of erecting a public clock. During the four succeeding years this sum, by local subscription, was increased until it amounted to £300, at which cost the tower was erected. The fine clock by which it is surmounted was supplied by Messrs. Gillett & Brand, of Croydon, at a cost of £160, and was presented to the town by H. G. Murray-Stewart, Esq. of Broughton. A good stone bridge crosses the Fleet, connecting the principal part of the town with that in Anwoth parish. At the foot of the town flows the small river Fleet, which here meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of 60 tons burthen and upwards, and the navigation of the river was considerably improved by the late Mr Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000, cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed, at an expense of £600. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain, timber, and wool, and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper have been discovered in the neighbourhood, which have been wrought to some advantage; specimens of copper from the Enrick mine, shown at the exhibition of 1851, were pronounced to be the richest in Europe. Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, through the interest of the late Mr. Murray; its municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies, and four councillors. A burgh court, for the recovery of small debts not exceeding £5, is held every fortnight, and a justice of the peace court sits every month for the parishes of Girthon and Anwoth. The parish church, which is a commodious building, was erected in 1817; its site is well chosen. The Free church, at the other end of the town, is also a spacious and handsome building, and contiguous to it is a church for the United Presbyterians. The parochial school is well attended. A masonic lodge, a library containing upwards of 1,400 volumes, and a reading room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals, have their respective members and supporters. In this neighbourhood, in the parish of Anwoth, are the ancient castles of Rusko and Cardoness. There are traces of three Roman encampments in the parish of Girthon. Rusko Castle, now in ruins, is the reputed castle of "Young Lochinvar," of Scott's ballads. On a hill near the town stands a plain stone monument or column erected to the memory of Samuel Rutherford, the divine; it overlooks the church where he preached, and was used to play football and other games. The column first erected was struck and thrown down by lightning in 1847, and the present structure rebuilt soon after. The market is held on Saturday; and the fairs on the first Monday after the 17th of June (old style), and a cattle market or fair, the third Saturday in September. The parish of Anwoth encloses an area of 11,774 statute acres, and that of Girthon 33,374 acres. In 1981 the former parish had a population numbering 728, and the latter 1,414; of these numbers, 1,370 were returned for the town of Gatehouse.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BORGUE, TONGLAND AND TWYNHOLM, AND THE VILLAGE OF RINGFORD.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, capital of the stewartry, a parish, and in the parochial union of the same name, 100 miles s.s.w. from Edinburgh, 55 E. from Portpatrick, and 28 s.s.w. from Dumfries. It occupies a peninsula situation on the east of the Dee, about six miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Frith, and is a town of considerable antiquity, but of its origin there is no authentic or even traditional record; but that St. Cuthbert's church was erected so long ago as the eighth century is unquestionable. The establishment of this church was followed by the construction of a small fort by the lords of Galloway, which in after times was superseded by a castle in the proprietary of the Crown, by whose authority the place was put under the government of a constable. During the domination of the Douglasses in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence; on their forfeiture James II. erected the town into a royal burgh by charter dated at Perth, 26th October, 1455. This grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I., on the 20th July, 1683, and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and thirteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; it joins with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben in returning a member to Parliament. The revenue of the corporation is considerably increased by the salmon fishings in the Dee, and the rents of three farms in the neighbourhood; and the town derives a certain degree of consequence and advantage from being the seat of the Stewart and Commissary Courts. Kirkcudbright, which has been materially improved, at the present day presents an aspect remarkably pleasing; within, it is regular, clean and neat, and externally it appears embosomed in the bountiful foliage of a fine sylvan country. It is composed of six or seven distinct streets, built at right angles with each other; the houses, which are for the most part two stories high, have a respectable and comfortable appearance, and at once bespeak the taste and easy circumstances of the inhabitants. The new Sheriff Court House, to which is attached the gaol, was erected on the site of the old Stewartry building, under the Sheriff Court House Act, at the joint expense of Government and the county. It has a very imposing appearance. The exterior is in the castellated style, with battlements and a projected tower in the centre, which harmonizes well with the towers of the old building behind; the interior has been fitted up in a manner at once elegant and substantial. On the ground floor are the offices of the procurators fiscal, the county and justice of the peace clerks' office, and police office; the second storey contains the court hall, a spacious room seated for 150 persons, and several other offices. The cost of the building was £8,583. From the tower above mentioned, an extensive view may be obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the ancient castle of Kirkcudbright, built in 1582, by M'Clellan, one of the lords of Kirkcudbright. The former gaol and court house is a very curious old edifice, with the market cross stuck up against it, supposed to have been erected about the middle of the sixteenth century. The new prison, erected for the Stewartry, is a plain oblong building, containing twenty-six cells. The monetary transactions, which are considerable, are conducted by three banks, viz., the Bank of Scotland, Limited; the National Bank of Scotland, Limited; and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, Limited. The burgh has a little shipping trade and a productive fishery, and the intercourse with Liverpool by steam navigation gives animation to the town and a stimulus to its trade. The shops and inns are very respectable; of the latter the Royal and the Commercial are the principal hotels. The harbour is the best in the stewartry; at the ordinary spring tides the depth of water is thirty feet, and at the lowest neap-tides, eighteen feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the bridge of Tongland, which is constructed of one arch of one hundred and ten feet span, and picturesquely blends with the surrounding landscape. A handsome iron bridge has been erected across the Dee at Kirkcudbright, at a cost of £10,000. The style is of the bowstring lattice construction; its length being 500 feet by 23 feet broad, consisting of five fixed spans of 71 feet each, and a compound span of 98 feet, which latter turns on a cast-iron cylinder, filled with concrete, to allow of the passage of vessels of considerable burden, beyond the bridge. The piers, over which stands a square column, furnished with a tripod lamp-stand and globular lamps, are clustered columns with fluted capitals, four of the columns being surrounded by an entablature, the whole forming a pier of the most graceful description, and admirably suited by its irregular contour for the position in which it is placed, being at once in harmony and contrast with the surrounding picturesque scenery. The approaches to the bridge are formed by curved parapets of cast-iron, to which are affixed a copy of the old seal of Kirkcudbright, together with the names of the provost, Samuel Cavan, the chairman of the bridge committee, and the engineers and contractors. The work of construction was commenced in May, 1865, and the bridge was opened to the public, together with the new court house above described, with a great demonstration, on July 8th, 1868. Previous to the erection of the bridge, passengers and carriages had to be ferried over in a flat-bottomed boat; in stormy weather, however, or when there was an excessive current, this mode of conveyance was not without danger. There is a regular communication kept up between this place and Liverpool, by means of a steam vessel once a week. The railway to Castle Douglas is a branch of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway, and gives ample accommodation to the district. The station is close to the bridge and Free church. The Established church, with nave and transepts, and a fine tower surmounted by a spire, was erected in 1836; it is a very tasteful structure, built wholly of stone, and stands in the centre of a beautiful plantation, through which are public walks. A handsome and substantial manse for the officiating minister has been built. The Free church of which the foundation stone was laid in August, 1872, and which adjoins the Johnstone Free school, is a handsome building of whinstone, with red sandstone facings, erected on the site of the old and former Free church. It has a square tower, surmounted by an elegant spire reaching to the height of 122 feet. The east and west ends are ornamented by elegant windows, with fine tracery. The entire length of the church is 82 feet, by 43 feet wide, exclusive of transepts, with seats for 712 persons. The cost of erection was upwards of £5,000. In High street is a neat chapel in which the United Presbyterian congregation worship. The ancient church has been pulled down, with the exception of a fragment enclosing a venerable monument of a former Lord Kirkcudbright; a recumbent figure of whom is in fine preservation. This portion of the ancient church is now appropriated to the use of a school. The Town Hall, an elegant structure of freestone, in the Grecian style of architecture, was erected in 1879, at a cost of £5,300. The Town Council voted £2,500, the remainder being obtained by public subscription. It contains a library, reading room, museum, and lecture hall. There is also the M'Kenzie Hall, founded by John M'Kenzie, Esq. of this town. It is a spacious and handsome building, and is used for lectures, concerts, &c. The academy, or grammar school, is a handsome edifice, comprising a spacious room for a public subscription library. The Johnstone Free school is a chaste stone building, with centre wings, and a handsome tower; it is for the tuition of both sexes, and was opened September 12th, 1848. The environs of Kirkcudbright are truly delightful; the rising grounds on each side of the river from Tongland to the sea are embellished with thriving plantations; and the general prospect, both marine and inland, is really lovely. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, the seat of the Earl of Selkirk, is about a mile from the town. The burgh is amply supplied with all domestic necessities, and provisions are comparatively cheap. The market day is Friday. The parish of Kirkcudbright extends over an area of 12,280 statute acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 3,346; and in 1881, 3,376, of this number 2,536 were returned for the town.

BORGUE is a parish and village, forming the west side of Kirkcudbright bay, entirely agricultural. The village, a small one, about five miles distant from Kirkcudbright, consists of a few neat houses, and contains a Free church and a church of the Establishment, also a public school. The island of Ross, which rises at the mouth of Kirkcudbright bay, belongs to this parish, and on it has been erected a lighthouse. Acreage, 13,581. Population in 1871, 1,087, and in 1881, 1,202.

TONGLAND or TONGUELAND is a parish in the Union and Steward Court of Kirkcudbright. A parish church and a public school are here. Acreage, 9,738. Population in 1871, 908, and in 1881, 878.

GATEHOUSE or TARBFF is a station in this parish, on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway.

RINGFORD or RED LION is a small village in Tongland, situated on the road between Twynholm and Castle Douglas.

TWYNHOLM a parish and village; the latter, a small one, is situated three miles from Kirkcudbright on the main road from Gatehouse to Castle Douglas. The soil is fertile, and the surface of the district rises into many small hills, partly arable. Of the extensive woods with which this part of Galloway was formerly covered, the only remains now existing are around the old castle of Compstone, a building pleasantly situated on an eminence high to the junction of the rivers Dee and Tarf. The village contains a small neat church of the Establishment, and a public school. Acreage, 10,484. Population in 1871, 717, and in 1881, 681.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM,

OLD BRIDGE OF URR AND SPRINGHOLM.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM is a parish and village—the latter, a small one, is 85 s.s.w. from Edinburgh, 14 s.e. from New Galloway, 13 w. from Dumfries, 7 e. from Parton, and 8 n. from Castle Douglas. The parish, which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, derives its name from the old church dedicated to St. Patrick, and Durham, a hamlet where it stood—the latter appellation signifying “the hamlet on the water.” The church is in the Gothic style, with a handsome tower, erected on the site of the old church, and built two centuries ago; there is also a Free church. Formerly a woollen mill furnished employment to many inhabitants of the village, but it is now undistinguished by manufactures of any kind, and is a place of no trade but that which belongs to a few shops for the accommodation of the inhabitants. The parish, which is between nine and ten miles in length, and about four in breadth, enclosing an area of 18,277 statute acres, is partly pastoral and partly arable; the former character prevailing in the north, the latter in the south of the district. A fair is held on the first Thursday after the 17th of March (old style). The parish contained in 1871 a population of 1,874, and in 1881, 1,816; of this number 489 were returned for the village.

OLD BRIDGE OF URR is a small village in the parish of, and two miles from, Kirkpatrick-Durham; seated on the banks of the Urr water, and contains but a few houses and no business worthy of notice.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile from Kirkpatrick, on the road from Dumfries. It contains a small independent chapel, built about the year 1806; a monument in front of the chapel was erected by public subscription to commemorate those brave covenanters who lost their lives in defence of their principles.

LAWRIESTON IN BALMAGHIE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LAWRIESTON is a small village in the parish of BALMAGHIE, 23 miles w. from Dumfries, 10 n. from Kirkcudbright, the like distance s.s.e. from New Galloway, and 7 n.w. from Castle Douglas. On the north-west the village is skirted by a mountainous district, which abounds with various kinds of game; in the east the land is more fertile. The parish has several small lakes, and a number of mineral springs; among the latter Lochenbreck Wall is a place of some resort in the summer.

The principal proprietors are Richard Dunning B. Cunningham, Esq., William Kennedy Lawrie, Esq. J.P. of Woodhall, and Graham Hutchinson, Esq., of Balmaghie House. Three miles to the east stands the parish church. A Free church is in the village. The parish of Balmaghie contains an area of 21,069 statute acres, and in 1871 the population numbering 1,985, and in 1881, 922.

NEW ABBEY,

BEESSWING, CARSETHORNE, KIRKBEAN, KIRKGUNZEON, MAINSRIDDLE, PRESTON MILL, SOUTHERNESS, WEST PRESTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village in the union of Kirkcudbright, and Stewart court of the shire. The village, a small one, is 80 miles s. from Edinburgh, 12 s. from Dalbeattie, 80 w.n.w. from Kirkcudbright, and 7 s. by w. from Dumfries, situated at the eastern extremity of the county near to the mouth of the Nith. The parish, which was originally called Kirkinder, takes its name from the once celebrated religious establishment of New Abbey, a monastery founded in the thirteenth century, for the Cistercian order of monks, by Dovergilla, daughter of Allan, Lord of Galloway. The ruins, which occupy an area of two hundred and forty by one hundred and fifty feet, are supported on arches and Gothic pillars, and the area itself is used as a burying ground. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, are traced to an extent of fourteen acres. To the north-east are seen the ruins of the Abbot's house, and the footpath between the two buildings, a mile long, is still the kirk road. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kinder and the dark braes of Criffel, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kinder there are two other lakes in the parish, namely Lochend and Craigend. Near the former is the spot where one of the early covenants of this district met an untimely end. The school of Kessoock stands on the edge of the lake, and the parish kirk, which was built with part of the ruinous materials of the abbey, is situated on the north side of the ruins.

On the Glen hill, a continuation of the Criffel range, stands a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo. It is of spiral form, ninety feet high, with a winding stair within. The base bears an inscription laudatory of the British troops and their allies. BEESSWING is a small hamlet in this parish, situate about six miles north-west of New Abbey village, and contains a Free church and a public school. The parish of New Abbey comprises an area of 13,199 statute acres, and in 1871 the population was 931, and in 1881, 906, of this number 336 were returned for the village.

KIRKBEAN is a small parish and village, the latter, very inconsiderable, is situated five miles s. of New Abbey and about ten s.e. of Dumfries, in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, and on the road to Dumfries. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birthplace of John Paul, otherwise Paul Jones, a "sea adventurer," who was born in 1745, and was the son of an honest gardener in the place. The walk between Kirkbean and Southwick, a distance of four miles, is considered the prettiest in the stewartry. On a fine clear day the Isle of Man and the Cumberland coast may be plainly seen. The conspicuous mountain called Criffel stands partly within the parish and partly within that of New Abbey, and there are within the former traceable ruins of the castles of Gavin and Weath, both of which were the property and occasional residence of the Regent

Morton. There are several other small villages in the parish—MAINSRIDDLE, containing a Free and an United Presbyterian church; WEST PRESTON and SOUTHERNESS, bathing villages, the latter village being situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs out to the Solway Frith. On the point is a lighthouse. CARSETHORNE and PRESTON MILL are small hamlets, also in this parish, both about a mile distant from the village of Kirkbean; the former is also a favourite resort for bathers in the season. Population of Kirkbean parish in 1871, 825, and in 1881, 793; acreage, 7,937. KIRKGUNZEON is parish lying eight miles w. from New Abbey and is a station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries Railway. NEW GALLOWAY,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BALMACLELLAN, DALRY AND CARSPHAIRN.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells, union and Stewart court of Kirkcudbright, 84 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 25 w. from Dumfries, 18 n.e. from Newton-Stewart, 14 n.w. from Castle Douglas, 8 n.w. from Parton, and 25 n.w. from Kirkcudbright, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which was thrown in 1831 an elegant stone bridge of five arches; this structure lying in the valley below the town, has a very pleasing effect. At its completion a dinner was given by the late Lord Viscount Kenmure, to fourteen of the oldest inhabitants of the town, whose united ages amounted to 1264 years. The houses of the town stretch along the public road, and form a tolerably well-built street. The business of the place is confined to the local domestic retail and handicraft branches. Galloway's burghal charter was conferred by Charles I., and the municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies, and nine councillors. A justice of peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, for the recovery of debts under £5; attached to the court is a criminal & debtor's gaol, with a steeple and town clock. The burgh unites with Wigtown, Stranraer and Whitborn in returning one member to Parliament. On the north side of the town, within the distance of half a mile, is the parish church, a neat stone edifice, with a square tower in the centre, built in 1822; in the same year a Sunday school was established, in which upwards of one hundred children are gratuitously taught. The churchyard contains an ancient tombstone having the armorial ensigns of the Countess's and Macfarlane's curiously sculptured upon it. At a short distance south of the town stands the ancient castle of Kenmure, once a place of considerable strength; Mary Queen of Scots lodged in it one night, on her way from this country to England. Loch Ken, which adjoins the town, is four miles and a half long, and in many places more than a mile broad; it abounds with pike and perch, and some of the former have been caught of the weight of fifty pounds. There is a commodious hotel in the town, the Kenmure Arms. The nearest railway station is five miles distant. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after the 12th of April, the first Wednesday after the 12th of July, the first Wednesday after the 12th of August, and the first Wednesday after the 12th of November. The parish of Kells embraces an area of 48,581 statute acres, and in 1871 contained a population of 1,007, and in 1881, 970; of this number 442 were returned for New Galloway.

DALRY (or St. John's) is a village, in the parish of its name, lying on the east bank of the river Ken; 9½ miles n. of New Galloway, and the same distance from Balmacellan, and 26 miles n. of Kirkcudbright; the southern portion of the district is in a beautiful valley, composed of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral, and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village of Dalry (the name of which signifies "the dale of the king") is surrounded with delightful scenery; and there is a good hotel (the Lochinvar) at the command of the visitor. In 1858 the Town Hall (or St. John's Hall) was erected, and is used for the purpose of holding public meetings, lectures, &c.; it was built by subscription, at a cost of nearly £400, and is a neat ornament to the place. There are several lakes in the parish; the largest, called Lochinvar, covers an area of fifty acres; in the lake stand the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and latterly Viscounts of Kenmure. The area of the parish is 34,535 acres, and its population in 1871 was 1,074, and in 1881, 988.

CARSPHAIRN, a parish and village, 13 miles n. of New Galloway, and 32 miles n. of Kirkcudbright, is situated near the river Deugh; the village contains a parish kirk, the manse, a parochial school, and a few scattered houses. The parish is somewhat extensive, but thinly populated; it is the most northerly and mountainous district in the stewartry, and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, with those of Dalry, Kells, and Balmacellan, are designated the district of Glenkens—famed for the true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as also for good horses of the Galloway breed. Acreage, 54,624; population in 1871, 545, and in 1881, 484.

The small village of BALMACLELLAN, about one and a half miles east of New Galloway, in the parish of its name, stands on the opposite side of the Ken to New Galloway, not far from the confluence of the stream with the head of Loch Ken, twelve miles south-west of Moniebuic. The parish is of a moory character, interspersed with some inconsiderable lakes. Acreage, 28,019; population in 1871, 1,057, and in 1881, 787.
